Seth Richardson Selected by Truman To Head Board of 5 Under McCarran Act

President Truman yesterday named a Communist-control board of five, and the Department of Justice arrested 20 persons in a round-up of propagandists. The names of only 17 of those seized were available here last night.

These actions flowed from the McCarran-Wood Act, which requires Communists and Communist organizations to register with the Attorney General.

Yesterday was the last day for the American Communist Party and its members to register voluntarily. They ignored the deadline.

Ralph E. Powe, attorney of this city, sought to file an injunction in District Court to restrain Attorney General McGrath from carrying out the provisions of the McCarren-Wood Act. He submitted a petition, signed by 107 individuals, which contended that the act violated the Constitution.

Harry Hull, clerk of District Court, refused to let Powe file the petition because it did not have the addresses of the signers. Powe promised to return in three days with the addresses and with more signatures.

President Truman named Seth W. Richardson, a Republican, as chairman of the new five-member "Subversive Activities Control Board." He will give up his part-time job as chairman of the Federal Loyalty Review Board.

The other four members are Peter Campbell Brown, a Democrat and Special Assistant to the Attorney General; Charles M. LaFollette, former Republican Congressman from Indiana and former executive director of Americans for Democratic Action; David J. Coddaire, a Republican and Boston attorney, and Dr. Kathryn McHale, Democrat, former general director of the American Association of University Women.

All the jobs pay $12,500 a year. The appointments were made on an interim basis. When Congress returns, Mr. Truman will make formal nominations, with the terms staggered.

The Department of Justice, in its coast-to-coast roundup of alien Communists, reached into nine cities to seize the first 17. These were described as the most active in fostering Communist propa-

Total national income for the second quarter of this year was 229 billion dollars, on an annual rate, as compared to 218 billion for the first three months of the year.

Montgomery Candidates Get Steam Up

Post-Primary Quiet Broken on 3 Fronts In Home Stretch

The political coffeepot in Montgomery County—after steeping quietly for months—has suddenly boiled over.

Republican, Democratic and Charterite campaigners have emerged from post-primary hiding to stump for their candidates with a welter of speeches and reams of political literature.

One of the hot blasts was fired last Sunday by Frederic P. Lee, president of the Montgomery County Council, when, in a letter to Warren Browning, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, he stated that he was going to vote for the Republican candidates even though he has been a "lifelong Democrat."

The Democratic State Central Committee replied yesterday that Lee was not a "lifelong Democrat," that at one time he had registered in the county as a Republican.

Browning was one of the speakers at a meeting last night in the Women's Club of Chevy Chase, at which he denied Lee's charge that the county Democratic machine is dominated by one man. He accused Lee of trafficking with Republicans to further his own political ambitions.

Both political parties were represented at the meeting.

DeWitt S. Hyde, Republican candidate for the State Senate, told the audience that the Democrats are trying to claim credit for the series of open forum discussions when, in fact, he suggested them last August.

Hyde charged that the Democrats "far from arranging the meetings, have stubbornly resisted pressure brought to bear to force them to send their people to forums to give the voters a chance to try and find out where the machine stands."

He also charged that the Demo-

High Court To Consider Smith Act

Decision in Conspiracy Case of 11 Top Reds To Become Landmark

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday agreed to consider the conviction of this country's 11 top Communists, all found guilty of conspiring to advocate and teach the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

The case will be argued on December 4.

In accepting the case, the court limited the argument to the constitutionality of the Smith Act (sponsored by Rep. Howard W. Smith, Virginia Democrat). One question is whether that act, which outlaws advocacy of overthrowing the Government by force, violates the free speech amendment to the Constitution.

The Government argues that the Smith Act has nothing to do with "thoughts or beliefs" but only with a conspiracy constituting a "clear and present" danger to the United States. Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman contended that the Communists' "real position" is that the free speech amendment "protects them and their Communist Party until they are ready to call their disciplined followers to action on the eve of a carefully planned coup d'etat."

In the past the Supreme Court has taken two points of view on similar efforts to control those who violently object to our form of government. One is the famous one enunciated by the late Justice Oliver Holmes in which he said a "clear and present danger" must be shown to permit such a restrictive law to stand. The other view has accepted the argument that Communist activities are so dangerous they may constitutionally be restricted.

Judge Learned Hand, writing the unanimous opinion for the United States Court of Appeals in the present case, held that there was a "clear and present" danger in modern-day Communist activities.

The 11 were convicted October 14, 1949, after a long and stormy New York trial before District Court Judge Harold R. Medina. Six Communist defense lawyers were given jail sentences because of their conduct at the trial and

Woman in Critical Condition

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A 66-year-old man yesterday shot and critically wounded his estranged wife and then fatally shot himself.

He was Charles E. Derrell, who lived at the Gordon Hotel. He died at 3 p. m. yesterday, less than an hour after the double-shooting in his wife's apartment, and shortly after he had been admitted to Emergency Hospital.

The wife, Mrs. Viola Derrell, 38, of 2550 14th st. nw., was in critical condition but still battling for her life early today at the same hospital.

Police said she regained consciousness briefly about 6 p. m. and identified her estranged mate as the one who shot her.

She told police she and Derrell had been separated since June and had quarreled on various occasions.

Seconds before the shooting, Mrs. Derrell pleaded with two telephone repairmen to "take this man with you. He broke into my apartment."

The repairmen, Gustavus Gray, 27, of 8467 Piney Branch ct., Silver Spring, Md., and Amos Heflin, 28, of 1424 L st. se., said they

Permit Jam Slows D.C. Construction

$15 Million Backlog In Inspections Dept. Causing Delays of Two to Three Months

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District Inspections Department is struggling with a backlog of 15 million dollars' worth of building permits, one of the largest in the postwar period, it was learned last night.

Builders and contractors are concerned about the delays in permit issuance, which are running from 2½ to 3 months on large projects, according to James B. Daily, chief engineer of the department.

But they get little comfort in complaints to the Inspections Department or the department boss, the Engineer Commissioner, Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young.

The more time spent in answering complaints or discussing problems, the less time available to study building plans and issue permits—that is the position of the permit-issuing personnel. What they need is help, not grievances.

Many builders realize this and suffer quietly, watching their overhead continue, supplies soar in price and become scarcer and capital grow tighter.

Many Causes Blamed

Inspections Department head Robert H. Davis said yesterday that the backlog developed in the spring and ballooned in the summer for these reasons:

1. The usual carry-over of building activity from the end of 1949 to 1950 was heavy and not completely processed for permits until the spring.

2. In June and July, the Korean situation brought in a surge of applications as "builders rushed to beat price rises and began to get worried about material supplies."

3. Three weeks ago when housing loan curbs were talked about, "builders rushed to beat the gun on that."

4. "Builders now are juggling materials as they get caught in price increases or shortages." The result is that the department "never gets rid of the job, some plans are revised four and five times and have to be checked that many times."

5. Most apartment building now is the elevator-style rather than the previously popular garden-type. The latter was simpler in design and thus easier to check for a permit, while the elevator-type involves heavier, more complicated construction, which takes more time of the permit engineers.

The result has been that permits for one-family dwellings—new and repairs—are issued about four weeks from the time the applications are filed.

Small commercial projects running about $30,000 or less are being held up about two months in the logjam.

Larger projects—both residential and commercial—are delayed from 2½ to 3 months. Included in this category are such projects as the new John Carroll High School stadium, the Georgetown University gymnasium, a $750,000 office building opposite the new Federal Courts building, several churches and synagogues, a mosque, homes for the aged, laundry and store structures, according to Daly.

Already this year, the total number of buildings for which permits have been issued has reached the total for the entire year of 1949.

Opportunity To End Wars Seen at Hand

Secretary of State Acheson said yesterday the United Nations victory over Communist aggression in Korea offered the free world an opportunity to devise "an international rule of law which would stop war."

The assurance was contained in a statement made for broadcast to American armed forces on the fifth anniversary of United Nations Day.

Meanwhile, President Truman departed by special train at midnight for New York, where he will deliver a long-planned address to the United Nations General Assembly at 11:30 a. m. today. Charles Ross, the President's press secretary, said the address will be "an important one on foreign policy." Mr. Truman will return to Washington this evening.

(Mr. Truman's talk will be broadcast and telecast beginning at 11:30 a. m. today.)

"I am glad to report to you that the United Nations is now working urgently to insure that if there is a next time, the free world as a whole will be prepared,' Mr. Acheson said.

The Secretary said the victory in Korea is much more than a military triumph, but something "of utmost importance" for all peoples.

"Men have long dreamed of an international rule of law which would stop war. Now we have the means of making that rule of law a reality.

"You are not only soldiers of your country. You are the first soldiers to serve in a great effort which has united 53 nations to resist wanton aggression in common cause and under a common banner—the United Nations flag."

Answering the question raised by American troops so often—"Where are the other United Nations forces?"—Acheson reminded his listeners:

"Remember that in World War II others had to carry the fight almost single-handed until we were ready to join in.

"The initial burden fell on the United States primarily because we and we alone had forces who could be brought to bear quickly. And time was of the essence."

Cotton Exports Quota Raised 146,000 Bales by Brannan

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan last night increased the export quota of American cotton 146,000 bales.

The new quota is 2,146,000 bales for the eight-month period ending next March 31. On October 10 Brannan imposed restrictions on foreign sales and set a preliminary quota of 2,000,000 bales for the eight months.

The restrictions on exports were imposed to protect supplies for domestic needs. A very short cotton crop this year has caused a tight supply situation.

The 146,000-bale increase will be apportioned among eligible importing countries later.

This increase came three days after President Truman told a news conference that the previous 2,000,000-bale quota was justified.

In announcing the increase, Brannan said it represented an increase in the carry-over supply of cotton from previous years. At the time the export limitation was put into effect, the carry-over had been estimated by the Census Bureau at 6,700,000 bales. On October 10, three days after the export order was issued, the Census Bureau increased the carry-over figure to 6,846,000 bales.

The increase in the quota is expected to have a strengthening effect on cotton prices. Cotton markets, which had advanced sharply in recent months, weakened after the limitation was placed on exports.

The resulting decline in prices brought sharp protests from Southern members of Congress and cotton growers, who contended the Government was treating growers unfairly by imposing what amounted to price controls on their product at harvest time.

Brannan said last night he will keep the cotton export situation under constant review and that adjustments in export quotas will be made as "the situation warrants."

Some Reservists to Be Released

By the United Press

Chairman Carl Vinson revealed yesterday that his House Armed Services Committee is considering extending the draft from 21 months to two years and said it probably will be necessary to call men who are now draft-proof.

In another development, Defense Secretary George C. Marshall ordered the release of all reservists recalled to duty involuntarily after they are thoroughly trained and can be replaced by draftees or volunteers.

Vinson also said Congress might be fooling itself if it enacts universal military service because there may not be enough men to fuel both the draft and UMT. The best thing, he said, would be to call up youths for two years service when they turn 19.

The Georgia Democrat outlined his views in a copyrighted interview in U. S. News and World Report, weekly news magazine, in which he also:

Called for the rotation of National Guard units pressed into Federal services so a few States don't have to make all the sacrifices. He said the military forces should set a ceiling on the service of Guard divisions and then replace them with others.

Proposed building the Marine Corps to 200,000-man strength plus 24 Marine air squadrons. He said the Leathernecks could be used "quite effectively" if his hope is realized and the United Nations succeed in setting up an effective international police force.

Said the United States must draft a stable, long-range defense program. Under the "crisis military policy" followed in the past, he asserted this country alternately has expanded and reduced its strength to reflect Russia's current attitudes.

Complained that service unification has been carried too far and said the Defense Secretary should farm out some of his vast authority to the Secretaries of the Navy, Air Force and Army.

Said it was "about time" for

West's Chiefs Meet Today On Defense

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Top military chiefs of the Western world meet here this morning under a compelling sense of urgency to speed the creation of an integrated western European defense force.

Out of the momentous sessions are expected to come the first concrete steps to quickly whip such a force together—including the immediate appointment of an American general as supreme commander.

The latter question has been up in the air, with strong elements in the United States Government favoring a delay in such an appointment until there were armed forces actually committed for him to command, organized into a single force.

The North Atlantic Council of Foreign Ministers, which met in New York last month, provided for appointment of a chief of staff to carry forward the organization pending the naming of the commander.

Now it appears the tempo will be stepped up and President Truman will be asked to name a supreme commander within the near future and will comply. General Eisenhower is the first choice of the European powers for the job, with Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, another possible choice.

The meeting this morning is that of the military committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Assembling in a closely guarded conference room at the Government Auditorium, on Constitution ave. between 12th and 14th sts., will be the ranking military commanders of at least 11 of the 12 NATO powers.

Representing Britain will be Fleet Admiral Lord Fraser of North Cape, first sea lord, and Field Marshal Sir William Slim, chief of the Imperial General Staff.

Also in the British delegation are Air Marshals Sir John Slessor and Lord Tedder, who though retired is serving as Britain's representative on the standing group of the military committee.

Gen. Charles Lercheres, chairman of France's Joint Chiefs of Staff and an airman, heads the French delegation. Sitting with him will be Lieut. Gen. Paul Ely, French representative on the standing group here.

Five-star General Bradley, who is chairman of the military committee, will open the session at 10 a. m. After brief public ceremonies, including an introductory

French Cabinet Votes to Arm West Germans

Approval Conditioned On Incorporation of Units in Europe Army

PARIS, Oct. 23 (NYHT.).—The French government decided unanimously today that West Germany may be rearmed, provided its military units are incorporated into a European army.

This agreement among Premier Rene Pleven and his coalition cabinet specifically banned formation of "a German national army," it was said officially. But there was no objection to the organization of units under international command.

It was expected that the United States, which has proposed German military power to strengthen the Continent's defenses, would be satisfied with the French government's decision.

Its agreement was designed to enable National Defense Minister Jules Moch to present concrete proposals for German rearmament at Saturday's meeting of the Atlantic Peace Defense Ministers in Washington.

Before his departure Thursday, the National Assembly is to debate the long-controversial issue. Discussion begins Tuesday with a declaration by Pleven. Government sources expected approval of the cabinet's action.

To oversee the European army, the French government also decided that a European Defense Minister is necessary. He would have jurisdiction over all the divisions in the special continental force.

The revolutionary acceptance of the rearmament principle, it was explained, is based largely on the Schuman plan for pooling the coal and steel industries of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, who gave his name to the coal and steel pool plan, also is credited with the new government project that will be elaborated by Pleven before the Assembly. Opinions vary as to whether France would agree to the West Germans being organized on the level of divisional strength, as the United States has suggested.

700-Man Air Defense Patrol Being Formed for D. C. Area

A Civil Air Defense Patrol for metropolitain Washington is now being set up, it was announced yesterday by Col. Jack Gault, commander of the National Capital Wing of the Civil Air Patrol.

The voluntary organization will seek to combine for defense purposes some 700 active CAP personnel, including about 100 rated pilots, and 325 private aircraft and their owners.

Gault revealed the plan at yesterday's national CAP meeting at the Annapolis Hotel. He said the new CADP, as it will be called, was approved at the recent closed meeting of all Washington area civil defense heads.

It was agreed at that meeting, Gault said, that the entire patrol will take its orders from the District's civil defense boss.

Gault said the CAP wing here does not expect "direct Air Force orders" and thus will be able to "spend most of our time on civil defense."

At the national CAP meeting yesterday, the key CAP officers from 52 wings all over the country were assured by Maj. Arthur Rhodes, commanding officer of CAP headquarters in the Pentagon, that the Air Force will call on the patrols only "in dire emergencies."

Enemy Premier Kim May Be in Same City; South Koreans Drive On Supposed Refuge

Bulletin

TOKYO, Tuesday, Oct. 24 (U.P.). The South Korean Sixth Division has picked up the trail of a large number of American prisoners of war near the Manchurian border and is trying to find them, American military advisers said today.

The American officers, advisers to the Sixth Division, said they had found evidence the Communists recently had used the Chongchon River town of Huichon, 50 miles south of the Manchurian border, as a collecting point for American prisoners.

The report gave no details. But it implied that the Sixth Division may have come close to catching up with the Americans at Huichon. It was thought the Reds may be herding their prisoners north toward the mountain stronghold of Kanggye, 20 miles south of the frontier.

Hope faded meanwhile for the quick rescue of 150 other American prisoners on a prison train north of Pyongyang and it was feared they may have met the same fate as 68 others from the same train who were shot and beaten to death by their Red guards.

SEOUL, Korea, Oct. 23 (AP). Korean Republican troops today plunged onward toward the Manchurian border, a scant 50 miles away, and a United States Eighth Army spokesman said he expected no more fighting against organized Red resistance in the Korean war.

While the Republic of Korea (ROK) forces slugged northward, Communists by the thousands poured out of the hills to lay down their arms. The total bag of prisoners passed the 120,000 mark—the equivalent of 12 Red divisions. In the past 24 hours 26,000 had surrendered.

Fleeing fragments of the once-potent North Korean army which invaded South Korea four months ago were funneling into the Kanggye pocket, a triangular area against the Manchurian border. Kanggye is 20 miles southeast of the Yalu River frontier.

The ROK Sixth Division, closest of all to the Manchurian border, was driving in the direction of Kanggye, where Red Premier Kim Il Sung was reported to be establishing a new command headquarters.

Noting heavy enemy traffic moving in that direction, the United States Fifth Air Force Monday raided Kanggye with B-26 attack bombers.

Results were not immediately known.

Kim Il Sung used the Kanggye angle to wage guerilla warfare against the Japanese in World War II, before Russian occupation forces made him head man of Communist North Korea in 1945.

The ROK Sixth Division's northward dash was last reported two miles north of Huichon in the center of the upper Korean peninsula. This put it within 50 air miles of the border and about 90 miles north of Pyongyang, Allied-captured Red capital.

Two other ROK drives also pushed steadily forward. The Capital division on the east coast reached Iwon, 18 miles northeast of newly-captured Pukchong and 76 miles southeast of Manchuria. Another spearhead of this division, stabbing through wild, mountainous terrain 18 miles inland, passed Cho, 63 miles south of the frontier.

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 23 (AP).—Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky warned today that "two parties," not just the United States, can set off the atomic bomb. He accused President Truman of advocating the old Hitler policy of "guns instead of butter."

The Soviet Foreign Minister assailed Truman's foreign policy in a two-hour speech before the 60-nation political committee of the United Nations Assembly. It came about 24 hours before the President is slated to address the U. N. Assembly. Vishinsky is to be one of the U. N. dignitaries greeting the American Chief Executive.

Calling once more for peace and for absolute prohibition of the atomic bomb, Vishinsky said:

"This weapon is available not only to one party but also to the opposing party. One cannot say, therefore, that its use will depend on the strategic plans of the one who attacks first. There will be two parties who can pull the trigger on this ghastly weapon: We do not know whether the first price will not be paid by an innocent party having no weapons, atomic or otherwise, at its disposal."

Vishinsky said a get-tough policy will not frighten the Soviet Union and added:

"They indulge in sabre rattling. They used the atom bomb for years but they failed. Now, of course, they are toting the hydrogen bomb around but I assure them they will fail as they failed before."

Vishinsky, growing red-faced and sarcastic, said Mr. Truman's San Francisco speech confirmed that the British-American bloc policy is based on "the cult of force and the cult of the atom bomb." He said the speech was full of anti-Soviet inventions and the speech had warned the American people that further increases in armaments expenditure were ahead.

"This is the old Hitler slogan of 'guns instead of butter,'" Vishinsky said.

Senator Harry Cabot Lodge, jr., U. S. delegate and a Massachusetts Republican who has had a hand in shaping the foreign policy blasted by the Russian, said in a statement that Vishinsky's views on peace and security are far different from those of most of the rest of the world. Lodge said the world is asking for Russian deeds and not words to demonstrate the Soviet Union's real intentions.

The Soviet delegate opened debate in the political committee on his main program for this year's Assembly. He has introduced a resolution calling for a declaration that the first country using the atomic bomb will commit a crime against humanity and be regarded as a war criminal. He also proposes a peace pact among the United States, France, Britain, China and the Soviet Union, listed in the Charter as permanent members of the Security Council and commonly called the Big Five. He seeks to have the U.N. call for a reduction by these five powers of their armed forces by one-third during the year 1950-51.

Vishinsky said millions of people signing the Stockholm peace appeal had called for abolition of the atomic bomb and for a judgment of war criminal against the first country to use it.

He said the Soviet Union in 1946 laid down clear and unequivocal proposals for international control and inspection of atomic energy.

Vishinsky said one objection to the one-third arms reduction proposal was that it would be a disadvantage to some countries while the Soviet Union, with "the greatest army in the world," would not feel this reduction." He quoted British Foreign Secretary Bevin as saying the Russian aim in making the proposal was to "weaken its potential victims."

"You, not we, have a great number of soldiers in foreign countries and are waging wars in Korea, Indo-China and Malaya, an dare thinking of some kind of and are thinking of some kind of shinsky asserted. "There is not even a hint of any aggressive intentions of the USSR."

Vishinsky said his country's postwar policy is based on "the inevitable peaceful coexistence of the capitalistic and socialistic systems for a long, long time."

He said the Russians have shown their desire for peace, and charged that Western attacks on Soviet policy are an attempt to smother Soviet peace efforts.

D. C. to Mark U. N. Day With Rallies, Talks

Washington will mark United Nations Day today with rallies, speeches and the ringing of church bells.

The main event will take place at 12:05 p.m. on the steps of the District Building, under the sponsorship of the Sesqui Centennial Commission and the National Citizens' Committee for United Nations Day.

A special message from former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, "father of the United Nations plan," will be read by Melvin Hildreth, chairman of the Citizens' Committee.

The District Commissioners will participate together with representatives of the Protestant, Jewish and Catholic faiths. Music will be provided by the United States Army Band and the American University Chorus. Second Lieut. Trever W. Swett, wounded in Korea, will speak.

The Federal Security Agency will hold an outdoor rally for FSA employes at 11 a. m.

At 11:30 a. m. the Agriculture Department will be presented with a United Nations flag by American Legion Post 35. This ceremony will take place in the patio of the Department's Administration Building.

Also at 11:30 a. m., President Truman will make a major speech from U. N. headquarters.

Washington churches have been asked to toll their bells at 11 a. m. Similar soundings have been planned throughout the Nation, though the time nationally has been set for noon.

The bell-ringing in the United States will be duplicated by the ringing of the "World Freedom Bell" in Berlin. It will be dedicated by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, national chairman of the Crusade for Freedom. The starting time of the program on the District Building steps has been pegged to the Berlin ceremonies, which will be broadcast.

The Crusade for Freedom has conducted a three-week campaign to collect signatures on Freedom Scrolls. The campaign has obtained 100,000 signers in Washington, and about 250,000 in Maryland.

The National Capital Forge of the American Public Relations Association will hear Melvin J. Fox, executive director of the National Citizens' Committee for U. N. Day, speak at 12:15 p. m. The luncheon meeting will be held at Lee House.

Nearby communities also have planned special events and celebrations.

In Alexandria, Vice Admiral John L. McCrea of the Defense Department will speak at an open meeting at the First Baptist Church. Earlier, Mrs. Mary D. Mack of the State Department will speak at a YWCA luncheon in Alexandria.

The Prince Georges County League of Women Voters will sponsor a "United Nations Birthday Party" at 8:30 p. m. in the old field house on the University of Maryland campus.

French Needn't Fear Germans, 'Ike' Asserts

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said tonight the United States would never go to the extent of rearming the Western Germans "so they would be a serious threat to France."

The general spoke at a news conference.

"If we could get West Germany into our camp it would be a tremendous thing in our favor. However, we would never go to the extent that they would be a serious threat to France."

Discussing Asia, he said:

"We ought to make the world see we can't do this job alone. We can't have forces stationed all around the world. If we do, we become a bunch of imperialists. We must first win friends. Then we must have highly mobile and very efficient military forces—Army, Navy and Air Forces—to meet any emergency.

The general added:

"I think we need three million men in our military forces and we can't compete with business and industry to raise them."

He was asked about unconfirmed reports that he was to be named commander in chief of Atlantic armies and he replied, "Not true."

Would he accept such an assignment? Eisenhower relied that he was still on active duty and that it would not be a question of being asked, but one of being ordered.

Control Law Extended

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—The House of Commons tonight extended for one year the provisions of a 1945 act that gives the government limited power to control prices and raw materials. The law was extended without a vote.

A gift of $150 has been given to Friendship House by Mu Phi Epsilon, a music sorority.

The check, $100 from the national order and $50 from the Washington chapter, was presented last Friday to Miss Lydia Burklin, Friendship director, by Mrs. William Bryan Orr, Washington chapter president.

It will be used in the scholarship fund of the House's music department, directed by Nowell Ferris.

Congress to express for the fourth time its desire for the construction of a "truly modern flush-deck aircraft carrier" such as the U.S.S. United States which was scuttled by the Joint Chiefs of Staff last year.

Proposed a 90-group Air Force to contain Russia's huge land armies if they should attempt an invasion of Western Europe. He said the Navy needs 250 submarines, 20 cruisers, two more battleships in active service and about 15 light and escort aircraft carriers.

Vinson, who estimated it will cost 35 billion dollars to 50 billion dollars annually to raise and maintain a three-million-man fighting force, warned it will require painful new sacrifices.

Higher Draft Age Preferred

He said that, under the two-year draft, the induction age would be left at 19 because it was fixed by the Armed Forces. Men 18 through 25 now must register but only those 19 or older may be called.

As for possible other steps to provide more soldiers, the Congressman said he would prefer to raise the draft age rather than call World War II veterans. If necessary, he said, Congress also "should tighten up the draft and not grant so many deferments."

He said former Defense Secretary Louis Johnson made a "terrible mistake" in cutting the armed forces. He said Johnson's desire for a "great record of economy" reduced American military strength to the bottom just when the Communists invaded Korea.

Vinson also said the armed forces have been "sadly delinquent" in their reserve programs and that "something drastic" must be done. The reserves' rolls must be screened, he said, to see that all Reservists actually are prepared to don uniforms and will not beg off on hardship grounds.

The new policy concerning involuntary Reservists applies to National Guardsmen as well as Reservists serving with other units, it was pointed out.

Acting to still a rising wave of criticism over the way in which the Reservists are being handled, Marshall directed the armed forces to set their manpower quotas six months in advance.

This move, he said, is to make sure Reservists being recalled to active duty will get at least four months' notice in addition to a 30-day delay between the receipt of their orders and their reporting date.

At the same time, the Secretary ordered the services to wipe from their roster of Reservists all those who aren't available for extended active duty because of physical or other reasons.

Marshall's directive came after President Truman, various Government agencies, and members of Congress had promised to look into complaints about the way men were being called up. The chief gripe from many Reservists was that employers were refusing to hire or promote them because of their uncertain military status.

Congressmen also had urged the Defense Department to rid the Reservists' rosters of the "deadwood"—those unable to serve for any reason—in order to put the reserve program on a realistic basis.

Marshall directed that Reservists now on active duty involuntarily can be retained only until:

1. Selective Service and enlistments can meet the requirements and,

2. The involuntary Reservists and units have reached a "maximum state of training."

Up until now Reservists have been called to active duty for an indefinite period to expand the armed forces quickly.

No estimate was available as to how long it would take the various reserve units now on active duty, including four National Guard divisions, to reach "maximum" training. However, there were indications it might take as long as a year.

VMI to Unveil Portrait Of Gen. George Patton

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 23 (AP). A portrait of Gen. George Smith Patton 3d will be unveiled during homecoming weekend this week at Virginia Military Institute.

Gov. John S. Battle will present the portrait on behalf of its donors at 11 a. m. Saturday in Preston Library. The portrait will be received by Maj. Gen. Richard J. Marshall, V. M. I. superintendent. Present to unveil the memorial portrait will be Mrs. Patton, widow of the World War II Third Army commander.

General Patton was a V. M. I. cadet in 1903 and 1904. His father and grandfather attended V. M. I. in 1877 and 1852, respectively.

More Controls Now Are Held Unnecessary

By The Associated Press

W. Stuart Symington spoke out yesterday against immediate price and wage curbs and asked the country to give other inflation controls a "chance to work," saying they might do the job alone.

Symington, who coordinates the whole economic mobilization program from his seat as chairman of the National Security Resources Board, faced reporters at his first news conference since that program began.

It would seem "dangerous," he said, to put sweeping controls on prices and wages without first trying to handle the problem of inflation with others—like higher taxes and curbs on credit buying.

Criticism of these methods is "premature," he said, "because we haven't given them a chance to work yet, and we ought to see what they will do. Maybe they will be sufficient to do the anti-inflation job, he said, if everybody gets in there and "plays ball."

"It begins to look as if everybody wants controls so long as the controls don't affect them," he remarked.

He didn't name the critics. Some of the criticism has been directed against the Government's failure to invoke price and wage ceilings. Other criticism has been aimed at one or another of the present controls, for example:

Builders have protested recent curbs on real estate credit. And over the week end, the CIO United Auto Workers said that curbs on consumer credit for the buying of automobiles, household equipment and houses are a "grievous blunder" and will cause mass unemployment.

Symington said he hated to talk about stabilizing prices and wages because "it's not my decision" and the decision must be made by Dr. Alan Valentine with the approval of President Truman.

Symington also:

1. Announced that forms will be ready by next week for industrial companies in applying for tax benefits because of defense plant expansion.

2. Announced that he has "quietly, without fanfare," set up a new Government board—nameless as yet—composed of the heads of all agencies that have any control over the economy in the mobilization effort. They meet regularly, he said, and get in some pretty free discussions on policy.

3. Declined to express himself on how much the steel industry must expand—a question on which the Commerce and Interior Departments now differ—but said he will take a position after he studies the facts.

Strike Call Ignored

HELSINKI, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Communist efforts to promote a general strike in Finland failed today when all workers not already on strike reported to their jobs. Some 83,000 workers remained idle awaiting the outcome of a membership vote on a bargaining agreement.

Marches, Massacre Are Related by Yank

Arlington Officer Leads Rescuers

The Washington Post

BRIG. GEN F. A. ALLEN, Jr. is credited with helping save the lives of the 21 Yank survivors of the Red massacre near Sunchon. Investigating a vague report of the massacre, he sped to the scene and found the 21 dazed and starving Americans, many of whom might not have survived the bitterly cold night. The General owns a house in Arlington

By Tom Lambert

PYONGYANG, Oct. 23 (AP).—A gaunt and weak young American told today of surviving three death marches totaling more than 400 miles and living through two Red shootings—including the machine-gun massacre of 68 prisoners near Sunchon Friday.

The youth was Pfc. Raymond Rindels who became 20 last September 28 while still a prisoner of the Communists.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Rindels, of Shell Rock, Iowa, h is a 6-foot 3-inch former MP (Military Police) who was transferred into the Nineteenth Infantry Regiment of the U. S. Twenty-fourth Division.

Rindels weighed 235 pounds when he was captured by the North Koreans on July 20, near Chinju in extreme South Korea. Today he weighs about 150 pounds.

Rindels wears false teeth and eye-glasses. When he was taken prisoner the Reds stamped on his lower plate and ground his glasses into powder. Without teeth for days at a time he was unable to chew the hard crackers given him by his captors.

On Chinju-Taejon March

Rindels was marched from Chinju to Taejon, a walk with death of about 150 miles. There followed a 90-mile forced march to Seoul and a 160-mile march north to Pyongyang. He left this former Red capital about October 14 with a group of other American war prisoners headed north by rail toward the Manchurian border.

Last Friday the Americans were divided into groups of 30 or 40 under the pretext they were going to be fed.

The prisoners were herded into embankments and told to sit down. As soon as they were seated the North Korean guards standing on the embankment sprayed them with Russian type sub-machine guns. Then other Reds walked among the dead and dying, sending final shots into the heads of some.

Rindels was hit in the right shoulder and left elbow by Red machine guns. As he slumped to the ground Americans on either side of him fell on top of him.

Korean guards shot the prisoners on top of him in the head, but he was protected by their bodies.

Five other Americans in Rindels group also lived through the Red murder-fire. Two of the survivors were either not hurt or refused to acknowledge their wounds.

"They really saved our lives," Rindels said.

"Yeager was a little guy but a real man," Rindels said.

Yeager and Henninger dragged Rindels and three other wounded Americans from the pile of dead, helped them across the fields and into the hills. They obtained cooked rice and water for the wounded men and cared for them until Brig. Gen. Frank A. Allen, jr., deputy commander of the First Cavalary Division found them near Sunchon tunnel.

War Is Over for Them

General Allen told Rindels and the other survivors:

"Take it easy, boys; the war is over for you now."

When first taken near Chinju he had tried to escape and was hit twice in the left arm.

The Korean Reds tried under threat of a gun to obtain military information from him. But Rindels didn't talk.

They took his New Testament and "tore it up leaf by leaf" in an effort to make him talk.

Rindels said the North Koreans murdered in cold blood the American prisoners who were unable to march north toward Seoul. Civilians, however, gave them candy and biscuits "and were very good to us."

Festive Falsies

BERLIN, Oct. 23 (AP).—The city fathers of Buehl, in southwest Germany, recently met in secret session to approve an expenditure of 10 marks ($2.38) for improving the curves of the Buehl "Plum Queen" for 1950. The money, to be spent to buy falsies, will be listed in the municipal books under "public festivities."

ON WAY HOME—Feigning death as their North Korean captors machine-gunned them and fellow American prisoners, these two Yanks survived the slaughter of 68 GIs near Sunchon. Twenty-one lived to tell of the Red atrocity. Here the pair sit on a truck after being rescued, awaiting their turn to be flown to a Tokyo hospital from Pyongyang

Men in Street Picked to Rule In Pyongyang

By Barbara Brines

PYONGYANG, Korea, Oct. 23 (AP).—The man on the street is going to run this battered capital for awhile.

A governing committee of 12 North Koreans was picked from the streets and installed in office today under United Nations military auspices.

The city has been without administration since Red Korean Premier Kim Il Sung and his Soviet satellite government fled to the north October 10.

Col. Archibald W. Melchior of Carmel, Calif., military affairs officer of the First Corps, is military administrator of Pyongyang.

He said he started the new government by choosing a responsible-looking Korean from the crowds of curious. He later formed the Korean's friends into a governing committee during a conference on a pile of logs.

Melchior, a civil affairs official at the start of the Korean occupation in 1945, described his government "conscription" procedure this way:

"Two days ago, before our troops had crossed the river into the city, I was looking around for some one I thought was the kind of person I could trust. . . .

"Coming down the street I saw a respectable man and found he was a hotel keeper named Lee Chong Han. Mr. Han said he would help me find the right people.

(In the proclamation and conversationally, the Americans used the family name last. The Koreans themselves usually place it first.)

"Later I saw him waving to me from across the river. He had quite a group with him. They are the people who have been appointed as the governing committee."

Another former school teacher, Yong Il Kim, heads the police department.

The amateur government will operate under U. N. military auspices until the Koreans are able to handle their own government or until succeeded by a U.N. organization.

Melchior said the Reds had sabotaged all utilities. The city is without lights, water or gas.

Melchior said they also took all movable foodstuffs. He said the food situation is critical.

The ragged and thin Koreans who remained in Pyongyang also have been looting everything they could find.

Pyongyang had a normal population of 500,000. It dropped to about 150,000 when it was captured. But thousands of persons are trudging back to their homes.

Capt. Albert Pyles Awarded Bronze Star

Captain Albert H. Pyles, 30, of Chevy Chase, Md., has been awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service in Korea, the United Press reported from Eighth Army Headquarters yesterday.

His wife, Mrs. Julie Pyles, and their children, Carol Ann, 4, and Michael, 11 months, live with his mother, Mrs. Joseph F. Pyles, at 408 High st., Chevy Chase.

Georgia Asks Ending Of Freight Rate Case

Georgia yesterday asked the Supreme Court to dismiss its 6-year-old freight rate discrimination case against 20 railroads.

It joined the carriers in asking the tribunal to throw out the suit on condition the railroads pay the $100,000 court costs. Georgia said it already had accomplished its aim of breaking the railroads' power to levy "discriminatory" freight rates in the South.

The railroads agreed to pay the court costs if the court decides to throw out the case.

Herndon GI Hurt Saving 2 Soldiers

Pvt. Jackie Lee Monroe, 18, saved the lives of two of his Army buddies in Korea but was wounded himself when he tossed a hand grenade from a dugout near Teague on September 21.

Pvt. Monroe

The only son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Monroe of 1010 Washington st., Herndon, Va., is is now at home on a 15-day furlough.

His mother said yesterday that he didn't care to talk about his experiences, but he had told her "the hand grenade exploded a few feet from his hands." Several fragments struck his fingers, leaving the other two men unscathed.

Young Monroe enlisted with his parents' consent in July, 1949, after three years at Herndon High School, where he was a member of the varsity football team.

After taking basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., he participated in maneuvers with the Tenth Engineer Corps at Porto Rico. In August he was shipped from Alaska to Korea with the Twenty-first Infantry Regiment of the Twenty-fourth Division.

Buried Red Weapons Believed Intended for Guerillas' Use

NINTH CORPS HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—An amazing Communist plan to supply guerillas in South Korea with artillery may have been foiled by the curiosity of an American salvage team, the ordnance officer of the Ninth Corps disclosed today.

Thirty-six pieces of heavy enemy ordnance were found buried in an area near Waegwan by members of a vehicle recovery team of the 515th Ordnance Medium Maintenance Company. The enemy equipment included trucks, field pieces and an entire field artillery battery.

The artillery battery could have been unearthed and put into operation within a short time, according to members of the Ordnance unit which examined the equipment. Only the aiming quadrants were missing from the cannon.

The discovery came when the team moved into the area to salvage an abandoned tank. The disturbed appearance of the ground aroused the men's curiosity and they borrowed a mine detector from an Engineer unit.

When the detector revealed the presence of large masses of metal, the men began digging. Uncovered were 10 antiaircraft guns, 10 howitzers, four antitank guns, two self-propelled guns and 10 trucks. Also a quantity of shells.

Ships Used by Soviet Now in So. Korea Fleet

YOKOSUKA NAVAL BASE, Japan, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Two American-built frigates that flew the flag of the Soviet Union a year ago joined the tiny navy of the Korean republic today to help secure victory over Communist aggression.

The 1400-ton destroyer-type fighting ships were among 27 lend-leased to Russia during World War II. They were returned to the U. S. Navy here a year ago, reconditioned and modernized.

Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, commander U. S. naval forces Far East, presented the two trim warships to Korean Minister Kim Yong Joo and their American-trained Korean crews.

Joy said the gift to the Korean navy will strengthen the bonds between the American and South Korean peoples and will have "a symbolic meaning to all men living under a shadow of fear."

703 of Canada's Force For Korea Called AWOL

OTTAWA, Oct. 23 (AP).—Newspaper reports say at least 703 of a 9000-man special Canadian brigade for Korea are absent without leave, but the Defense Ministry put off making any statement on the situation today.

More than 100 of those absent, already are classed as deserters, having been absent more than 21 days, the newspaper reports said.

Defense Minister Brooke Claxton said Saturday the figures he has are not sufficient for issuing a comprehensive statement, and it was learned today that no such statement is planned for the time being. It probably won't be made until the destination of the force, which may be sent somewhere besides Korea, is decided.

World Bank Scotches Report on Tito Loan

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

News reports from Belgrade declaring that the World Bank has offered Yugoslavia a 200-million-dollar loan drew a different version from bank officials here yesterday.

The maximum amount which the bank is prepared to offer Marshal Tito's government, it was indicated, is about 25 million dollars.

The news stories, quoting "a high Yugoslav source," said World Bank President Eugene Black had discussed the situation with Tito during his visit to Belgrade, and offered to lend 200 million dollars.

In Washington yesterday, informed bank sources indicated the story was considerably garbled. These, they said, were the facts:

Black told Tito that from the findings of bank economic missions to Yugoslavia, it appeared that the maximum further indebtedness the Yugoslavs could incur, with the possibility of repayment, was the equivalent of 200 million dollars.

Black also suggested that Tito agree to let the bank be his "banker"—not in the sense of extending loans to that amount, but rather to review and advise on total Yugoslav borrowing, from whatever source.

The bank president also indicated his organization would be willing to consider a loan to Tito amounting to the equivalent of about 25 million dollars. But only about half of this would be in dollars. The rest would be in other currencies, mostly of western European nations.

The reason for this is that economists feel the country is close to the top limit of its ability to repay loans in dollars. It can, however, earn other currencies by exports to its traditional trading partners—other Western European countries. Furthermore, much of the supplies Tito wants for industrial development are available in those countries as well as in the United States.

During the past year, the bank has received assurances from member countries "in principle" that they will extend limited amounts of their currency for bank loans.

If they were willing, they could extend further credit to Yugoslavia, up to the amount of the 200 million dollars that country wants, by means of trade agreements. These would entail furnishing industrial equipment to Yugoslavia, against the promise of repayment, in food and raw materials, at a later date.

Discussions on the Yugoslav loan have been conducted intermittently here for more than a year.

Military Chiefs Arrive for Defense Talks

statement by Bradley, the committee will go into closed session. Groundwork for the meeting, together with the over-all plan, has been prepared during recent weeks by the three-man standing group, headed by Bradley.

That plan, of course, is secret but is known to spell out, far more definitely than before, what each Nation is to contribute to the nation is to contribute to the time-table and the size of forces to be committed will be stepped up.

If the military chiefs reach an agreement on this vital matter, they will present their recommendations to NATO's defense committee. This higher echelon group, made up of the defense ministers of the powers, meets here Saturday.

Today's meeting also is expected to recommend the immediate naming of a supreme commander rather than an interim appointment of a chief of staff. From the assignments given them by the NATO Council last month, it is also evident they will consider a reorganization of the entire set-up. At least some of the existing regional groups probably will be eliminated.

The question of rearmament of Germany and inclusion of Germans in the new Western European army is not likely to be discussed at tomorrow's session. Because of the tremendous political ramifications of the problem—particularly in France—it will be left to the defense ministers. They now are gathering here and this will occupy the attention of both the ministers and top military men at many private sessions this week.

How far the French government can go in meeting American proposals for inclusion of German divisions in the NATO Army is now being decided in Paris. That and the selection of a supreme commander are the big question marks of this week's historic sessions.

There may be a vacant seat at the conference table today. The chart prepared at the Pentagon leaves a place for an Icelandic representative, but last night officials there had received no word as to whether there would be one.

Iceland has no organized armed forces.

Luxembourg will have its chief of general staff, Col. A. J. Jacoby, as its sole representative. Representing Canada is Lieut. Gen. Charles Foulkes, who commanded the Second Canadian Division in the Battle of Falaise and the later fighting around Antwerp and into the Netherlands. With him is Vice Admiral Harold T. W. Grant, now chief of naval staff, who commanded the British cruisers Diomede and Enterprise and later the new Canadian cruiser Ontario during the war.

Belgium has Lieut. Gen. E. Baele, Army chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. L. Leboutte, Air Force chief of staff, here. Norway's representatives are Lieut. Gen. Bjarne Oen and Read Adm. Johs E. Jacobsen. Denmark has its Army and Navy chiefs of staff, Lieut. Gen. E. Goertz and Vice Adm. A. H. Vedel, on hand.

Representing Italy is Lieut. Gen. Efisio Marras, Army chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. Cesare Lovera di Maria. The Netherlands has Gen. H. G. Kruls, chief of the joint chiefs of staff and Rear Adm. Jonkheer H. H. van Foreest. The chief of staff of the Portuguese armed forces, Gen. Anibal Passos e Sousa, represents his Nation. He is accompanied by Rear Adm. Jaime da Cunha Gomes, chief of naval staff.

French Supply Base Harassed By Ho's Rebels

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 23 (AP).—The supply center of Tienyen, a key position on the 100-mile French frontier defense line, was under continual harassment today by Communist-led Viet Minh forces, a French military spokesman reported.

With the abandonment of the important frontier post of Langson, the French have set up a line defending the rich Red River Delta around Hanoi and anchored on Dinh Lap, southeast of Langson. The loss of Tienyen would isolate French positions extending northwest to Dinh Lap.

There are large warehouses in the Tienyen area, stocked by convoys from Haiphong and small ships touching at Tienyen's inlet port.

The western end of the frontier defense line has already been pulled back 30 miles from Langson, sacrificing the post of Locbinh and a string of blockhouses on the route to Dinh Lap.

There was no new report on the situation at the large frontier post of Laokay, 210 air-line miles northwest of Hanoi. It is isolated and has to be supplied by airlift.

Meanwhile, new Viet Minh assaults flared up in South Viet Nam, where 15 trucks were destroyed in a French civilian convoy 60 miles north of Saigon. A French armored car was damaged in the ambush.

Rebels also sabotaged rail lines, raided plantations and harassed French outposts in the south.

D. C. Defense Needs Outlined by Fondahl

An estimated 100,000 volunteers will be needed for the civilian defene in Washington Inspector John E. Fondahl, acting defense director for the District, told the Georgetown Citizens Association last night.

Fondahl estimated 60 to 70 thousand will be needed in the warden service alone. A 5000-man police reserve corps is now being organized and others will be needed in the medical, rescue, and welfare units, he said.

Inspector Fondahl said the civilian setup is not complete since plans for individual groups and organizations have to be integrated and coordinated.

Earlier, the association passed a resolution requesting the traffic director to remove the rush hour no-parking signs on M st. between 28th and 36th sts.

Mead Recital Lacking in Simplicity

By Paul Hume

Ernest Mead's recital at the Phillips Gallery last night was less a piano recital than an accounting of the music of John Powell.

Powell, born in Richmond in 1882, has spent a lifetime in examining folk sources of music. In fairly extensive compositions for orchestra, solo instruments, and voices, he has employed Negro themes, old folk melodies, and the modal systems upon which many of these are based.

Young Mead, an ardent disciple of his teacher, included five pieces, still in manuscript, written for piano, but based on such famous tunes as the Demon Lover, Green Willow and Pretty Sally.

While these are essentially legends to be sung, their beautiful tunes are catching in sound, and so free in style that it is fitting for them to be used in purely instrumental writing.

At the same time, the essence of the folk song is its underlying simplicity. Thus it is out of place to end one of them with an elaborate nineteenth century series of bravura arpeggios. Were the two longest of these shortened by at least half, it would make the set more consistent in maintaining interest.

Mead opened his concert, for which he provided his own commentary, with an engaging pavan by a young Virginian, Hilton Rufty. Here is the spirit, the sound, and the whole motion of the ancient dance. It is a fine piece of piano writing, and was played the best of anything on the program.

For Mead is at present an amateur pianist in sound—one who loves to play, has talent, and can outline a piece with some success. But before he will be a real artist on the piano, he must take his foot off the overworked pedal, play both hands together, and see to it that all notes are articulated.

As for Powell's Sonata, which closed the program, the less said the better. It was vaguely conceived and played more vaguely.

Takoma Park Approves Signs For Children

The mayor and council of Takoma Park, Md., finally agreed last night to permit the Sligo Park Terrace Citizens Association to erect "children-at-play" signs in residential areas.

They first voted down, 4 to 3, a proposal to put up the warning signs to motorists. But before the meeting adjourned, they accepted a motion, 4 to 2, by Councilman Lawrence Oosterhous to allow the citizens association to set them up on an "experimental" basis.

Thomas F. Hicks, president of the Sligo Park Citizens Association, told the council he spoke for parents in a five-block area who want the signs put up to warn motorists.

Mayor Ross Beville said studies in other municipalities showed that the signs encouraged children to play in the streets and that motorists do not observe the warnings. Councilman H. Brooks Perring, chairman of the public safety committee, and Police Chief C. E. Thomas opposed the signs.

A public hearing on renaming streets and renumbering houses throughout Takoma Park was set for 8 p. m. November 16 in the Takoma Park Junior High School.

The Montgomery County Board of Zoning Appeals notified the council that public hearings will be held October 26 on applications for convalescent homes at 45 Poplar ave., 260 Maple ave., 100 Baltimore ave. and 716 Hudson ave. Approval has been granted for convalescent homes at 404 Holly ave. and 61 Philadelphia ave.

Oldest Inhabitants

More than 150 members of the Oldest Inhabitants, Inc., last night took part in a symposium on Negro business at Odd Fellows Hall, 9th and T sts. nw.

They heard Emmer Martin Lancaster, a Commerce Department adviser, outline the gains made by Negroes in business in the last decade, especially in banking, home financing and insurance.

The association voted approval of Woolsey M. Hall's selection as a member of the District Board of Education. The group admitted W. Earle Frazier, 763 Hobart st. nw.; Norman Milburne, 2818 Georgia ave. nw., and Clayton Collins, 413 E st. ne., to membership.

North Capitol

John F. Hardie, a retired Government employe who lives at 1921 North Capitol st., last night was elected to his twelfth consecutive term as president of the North Capitol Citizens Association.

Also reelected at the meeting in Atonement Lutheran Church were William Sheehan, vice president; Miss Hazel Harper, secretary-treasurer; Thomas Bigham, financial secretary; and Joseph Norris and Miss Harper, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association voted to contribute $10 toward court expenses in the gas rate fight.

Shipley Terrace

The Shipley Terrace Citizens Association last night protested the lack of adequate cafeteria facilities at the new Stanton School at Hamilton rd. and Alabama ave. se.

Members at the meeting at 2602 Southern ave se., complained that Shipley Terrace children are forced to make a bus trip home to get lunch at noon.

The group had no complaint against school officials but criticized the lack of provision for facilities in the original plans. A three-member committee was appointed to discuss the problem with school officials.

Final plans were made for the association's annual Halloween party at 7 p. m. Sunday at 23d st. and Southern ave. se.

120,000 No. Koreans Now Held by Allies

Kunu, 18 miles north of Sunchon and 70 miles southeast of Manchuria.

British Twenty-seventh Brigade troops likewise crossed the river near there.

The ROK First Division also put troops north of captured Tokchon, 23 miles northeast of Kunu, and at Anju, near the west coast of Korea's narrow waistline.

An ROK Sixth Division column slashed in 15 miles north of Anju and seized the town of Yongbyon.

Stiffest recent Red resistance was as old as Sunday, in actions involving Republican Eighth Division forces and British and Australians 35 to 50 miles north of Pyongyang. The enemy fled after four hours of rear-guard fighting that cost him 200 dead and 300 wounded.

In general, resistance had vanished.

Many prisoners that the Reds had taken months ago were escaping—but not all. The Reds tarried long enough to massacre some.

Sixty-eight Americans were machinegunned to death near Sunchon last Friday evening, and 500 South Koreans were reported bayonetted and burned at Yongchung, near the east coast.

The Eighth Army spokesman, in stating his personal opinion that no more organized opposition need be expected, added that he believed the only battle action left in the United Nations "advance to the Manchurian border would be against small pockets of Red troops.

Surrender by Thousands

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead, returning from the Sunchon area, reported that "Reds are coming out of the hills literally by the thousands and laying down their rifles. The ROKs are virtually unopposed. Only small scattered groups of Reds are met."

The roads, Whitehead said, were lined with civilians who only a short time ago were in the Communist army. They had changed into civilian garb and joined others at the roadsides in cheering the ROK troops advancing northward.

However, Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton at Wonsan reported menacing signs of enemy activity behind the front. Civilians, he said, reported 3000 ragged Red soldiers, in groups of 200 to 300, were venturing out of the hills 20 miles south of Wonsan. American planes failed to locate them.

Civilians said the hungry Reds were making only foraging expeditions.

Mines Block Wonsan Port

The port of Wonsan, meanwhile, was still closed to Allied shipping, said Rear Admiral Allen E. Smith, commander of the United Nations blockade and escort force in Korea. He said a 30-mile-long mine field, laid with Soviet mines under Russian supervision, plugged the port. Five Allied minesweepers have been sunk in Korean waters.

Lack of the port facilities forced the U. N. command to establish an airlift Monday to rush food to allied troops who had used their last rations for the noon meal. However, Kojo, 58 miles south of Wonsan, had dockage for LST supplying advancing ROK troops.

Allied warplanes hunted for troop and transport targets north of the advancing U. N. forces. The operations base for F-80 Shooting Star jet fighters was moved Sunday from Japan to Korea, providing greater raiding range for fuel-hungry jets.

Much Red Booty Seized

Rising almost as rapidly as the tally of prisoners was the Allied bag of weapons, equipment and supplies—enough, an intelligence officer said to fit out 12 infantry and 2 tank divisions. Compliations of this material, all of it captured below parallel thirty-eight, were not complete.

Buried in a secret mound near Waegwan, along the old Pusan perimeter, American soldiers discovered a huge cache of enemy trucks and an entire field artillery battery. An ordnance officer said the equipment probably was hidden by North Koreans to supply guerillas.

Thirty-six heavy guns were found. Weapons uncovered included 10 antiaircraft guns, 10 trucks, 10 howitzers, 4 antitank guns and 2 self-propelled guns.

Material taken below the Parallel 38 and now being catalogued includes 534 Russian-made tanks, 196 122-mm. howiters, 485 76-mm. guns, 232 122-mm. mortars, 1704 82-mm. mortars and many pieces of equipment. an intelligence spokesman said.

Remaining enemy troops in Korea, the spokesman estimated, number 57,000. This figure varied somewhat from previous totals, based on an Army formula for calculating numerical strength. However, briefing officers said the estimate of enemy materiel losses was the most accurate to date. Much additional equipment has been captured north of the parallel.

Observance Tuesday of United Nations Day in Seoul happens to coincide with the completion of four months of war in Korea. U. N. representatives said the celebration may be more elaborate elsewhere but no more significant than in this Korea Republican capital, symbolizing as it does the U. N.'s first military campaign to enforce peace.

"Korea is the first country to be liberated by the concerted action of the U. N.," said Brian Meredith, spokesman for the U. N. Commission in Korea.

"The Korea situation put teeth in the U. N. Charter for the first time, showing that the people of the world were determined to check aggression and to meet force with force if need be."

Walsh Report to Guard Assn. Hits Phases of Mobilization

By The Associated Press

A report critical of some phases of mobilization, particularly in the Air National Guard, was presented yesterday by Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, president of the National Guard Association of the United States.

General Walsh and other officers also said, in reports to the association's seventy-second general conference, which opened at the Mayflower Hotel, that unless Congress passes a universal military service law the National Guard "may wither on the vine" for lack of recruits.

The theory was that if mobilization lasts for several years the pool of eligibles for voluntary recruiting will be soaked up.

Without naming those he held responsible, Walsh said, "There are reasons to believe efforts were made to bring into the active military service of the United States only small units of the Air National Guard . . . and then cannibalize them."

By cannibalize, he meant using personnel from the guard units to strengthen other air units, with the National Guard organizations losing their identity.

Walsh protested, too, because he said Defense Department and Army officials made "weird assumptions" they had control of deferments and transfer of personnel in the National Guard.

"Perhaps some day defense authorities will realize that they have no control or jurisdiction over the Army and Air National Guard in time of peace," General Walsh said.

A special committee complained that lack of leadership by the Federal Government is delaying the development in many states of adequate plans for protecting civilians in a war emergency.

Freedom Bell, Truman to Hail U. N. Birthday

By The Associated Press

Today is United Nations Day.

President Truman will sound the keynote in a speech before the United Nations General Assembly. Then, from behind the Iron Curtain, the "Freedom Bell' will ring out in the tower of West Berlin's city hall.

ties across the United States will

Church bells in many communi- echo the peal of the "Freedom Bell" as it sounds along the radio waves of the United States and Europe at 12:03 p. m., EST. In many places, authorities have called upon the public to offer up "peace prayers" at that moment. Thousands of schools will join in ceremonies.

It is the fifth anniversary of the day when the United Nations Charter came into effect.

The Berlin bell is a 10-ton affair paid for by popular subscription in the United States. It toured 26 major U. S. cities before it arrived in Berlin last Saturday.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, U. S. chairman of the "Crusade for Freedom" which sponsors the bell, will make the formal dedication in Berlin. Clay was U. S. commander in Germany at the time of the Berlin blockade, and more than any other man was responsible for breaking that blockade. Ernst Reuter, mayor of West Berlin, also will speak.

In Korea the day will have special meaning. Under U.N. auspices most of Korea has been freed of Communist armies, and the U.N. is to undertake a program to rehabilitate the country. In a Seoul observance, speakers will include President Syngman Rhee, U. S. Ambassador John J. Muccio and Dr. Chong Il Hyung, executive director of the Korean Association for the United Nations.

Errol Flynn, Patrice Wymore Are Married on French Riviera

AP Wirephoto via Radio from London

CHAMPAGNE HOUND—Patrice Wymore, Errol Flynn's new bride, holds pét dachshund, Greno, as the movie star offers him a taste of champagne at a pre-wedding party at Nice.

NICE, France, Oct. 23 (AP).—Film Actor Errol Flynn and Actress Patrice Wymore were married today in civil and religious ceremonies on the French Riviera.

After a ceremony before Mayor Charles Palmaro in Monte Carlo this mornng, they were wed this afternoon in the Lutheran Church of the Transfiguration. The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Wymore, of Salina, Kan., attended.

The actor was formally attired for the religious ceremony, in contrast to a blue business suit he wore at the civil proceedings. Miss Wymore wore a full-length white gown with a four-yard train.

It was the third marriage for the 41-year-old Australian-born Flynn, the first for his bride.

The ceremony was like a neighborhood wedding that might have taken place in the mid-West. There was no Hollywood glitter and glamor, and no mob scene.

New World Copyright Convention to Get Study

The possibility of establishing a new Universal Copyright Convention is beng studied by an international conference which convened here yesterday.

The meeting of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization's Committee of Experts on Copyright will study the replies of 41 countries that replied to a UNESCO questionnaire concerning the advisability of a new copyright convention.

The majority of the countries—among them, Canada, France, India, Italy, Japan Mexico the United Kingdom and the United States—indicated a belief that a new convention would improve copyright protection throughout the world.

Among the aspects of the copyright problem expected to come before the committee are: the form of copyright notice deposit of copies of material for which copyright is being sought, and translation rights.

Following study of the replies to the questionnaire, the committee will consider a proposal that an inter-governmental conference be convened for preparation of a final draft of a new universal convention.

Should an inter-governmental conference be convened, it will be the first successful attempt in history to assemble the countries of the Western Hemisphere, Europe and other areas of the world for the specific purpose of adopting a universally acceptable copyright convention.

The new convention would not supersede the Berne and Pan-American conventions, the major international copyright agreements now in effect, but supplement them.

Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans, as chairman of the committee of copyright experts, is presiding at the meeting. Besides the United States, the experts come from Turkey, the United Kingdom, The Netherlands, Switzerland, France, Mexico, Denmark, Canada, Belgium, Italy, India and Cuba.

The conference, meeting in the old House Office Building, is expected to conclude November 4.

September Living Cost Up .5%; New-Type Report Is Planned

The cost of living continued to move upward last month. The Governmnet's consumers price index for September 15, announced yesterday, inched up 0.5 percent from the previous month and stood at 173.8, meaning 73.8 percent above the 1935-39 average.

This was only 0.4 percent below the record high of 174.5 in August and September, 1948. It was 2.5 percent above the level of a year ago and 30 percent above the index of June, 1946, when most price controls were abandoned.

Meanwhile, steps were under way to revise the index to take account of changing buying patterns by consumers and price increases following the Korean invasion.

"Since the outbreak of the fighting in Korea last June, sharp price increases have already occurred in a number of commodities and similar changes may take place in others," explained through Ewan Clague, commissioner.

The index is taking on increasing importance in American business economics as more and more contracts between unions and employers allow for wage changes as the index rises or drops.

For that reason, the changes necessarily must be made gradually. Next year, two separate sets of indexes will be issued each months, one on the old basis, the other as revisions are incorporated. Some if not all of the cost-of-living wage contracts are tied inflexibly to the old basis of calculation.

The latest 0.5 percent increase in the index came in the face of a reported decrease of 0.2 percent in the price of food, one of the big items. Leaders in the upward push were house furnishings and apparel, although fuel, electricity and refrigeration costs were up 0.6 percent.

Pontecorvo Passed Tests For Security

LONDON, Oct. 23 (NYHT).—Commons was told today that Dr. Bruno Pontecorvo, Italian-born British atomic scientist who has mysteriously disappeared, had been investigated several times by security officers and that his "screening was particularly satisfactory."

George Strauss, Minister of Supply, said "Dr. Pontecorvo's contacts with secret (atomic) work have been very limited." But he added "it would be quite impossible to say that he had not been able to gather information that might be of value to an enemy."

Dr. Pontecorvo, senior scientific officer at Harwell, Britain's atomic research plant, was granted leave of absence on July 25 and was due to return to duty August 31. He had accepted a position at Liverpool University.

Dr. Pontecorvo in the last few days has been reported in Finland and Leningrad. There is some speculation here that he may have been kidnaped while on the continent.

[Finland's security police today were ordered to scour the country for Dr. Pontecorvo, the Associated Press reported. Finnish authority, as reported, he did so illegally ties said if he did leave the counbecause they are still holding his passport.]

In questioning Strauss, F. L. Erroll, Conservative, said Dr. Pontecorvo's sister "is the wife of a Communist official in Italy." He asked "how reliable" was the screening of the scientist in view of this. Other members joined Erroll in questioning Strauss about Britain't screening system.

Strauss said there had been "a certain tightening up of the system" after the Fuchs case. (Dr. Klaus Fuchs, atomic scientist at Harwell, was sentenced to 14 years' imprisonment last March for revealing atom secrets to Russian agents.)

Asked if security officers still believed in the loyalty of Dr. Pontecorvo, Strauss said: "Well, I think we should wait just a few days longer to see what happens."

49 Head Bring $69,725 At Virginia Cattle Sale

WARRENTON, Va., Oct. 23 (Spl.).—Forty-nine head of Aberdeen-Angus cattle, including three bulls, sold for $69,725, an average of $1408 per head, at the Virginia Aberdeen-Angus Breeders' thirteenth annual sale here today.

The Supreme Coort yesterday refused to decide before election day whether a Maryland candidate for Governor must take the Ober law loyalty oath to get on the ballot.

The effect is to bar Louis Shub, a Baltimorean who has refused to take the oath but who has filed as the Progressive Party candidate, from getting his name before the voters on November 7.

The court ruling was 6 to 3 against immediate consideration of Shub's appeal from a Maryland Court of Appeals ruling. Chief Justice Vinson and Justices Black and Douglas formed an unusual trio in dissent.

All nine justices then joined in refusing a related request by Maryland's Secretary of State Vivian E. Simpson for a quick pre-election hearing on the State court's ruling that a candidate for the U. S. House of Representatives does not have to take the same oath. The candidate is Thelma Gerende, Progressive candidate in Maryland's Second District.

In a short unsigned majority opinion, the Court held that it would take no action now because the Maryland court has yet to file its opinion in the case. The State court split, 3-to-2, on the oath for governor case but was unanimous in the House case.

The three dissenting Supreme Court justices said the refusal to act in Shub's case "in all probability" denies him "an opportunity to have a final decision on the grave constitutional questions which he presents." The justices said the question would be "moot"—a dead letter—once the election is over.

The argument involved in the two cases revolves around only part of the controversial anti-subversive act passed by the 1949 General Assembly. Maryland voters will decide November 7 whether to keep or junk the entire act.

A Baltimore Circuit Court judge first found the whole act unconstitutional but the Court of Appeals reinstated the law without ruling on the constitutional issue.

The law carries heavy prison sentences and fines for working to overthrow the State or Federal governments by violence. Five-year prison sentences and $5000 fines are provided for knowingly belonging to a subversive organization.

Five Named to Board to Control U. S. Reds

Court to Hear 11 Reds' Case

Of the 11, Eugene Dennis, secretary of the Communist Party, is serving a one-year jail term in a contempt of Congress case. The 10 others are free on bail on order of Justice Robert H. Jackson. Jackson ordered their release on the grounds that "a substantial question"—the Smith Act's constitutionality—was involved in the case. The rest of the court obviously agreed with Jackson in accepting the case for review.

Justice Tom C. Clark, former Attorney General, did not take part in yesterday's ruling and presumably will take no part in deciding the case.

The 10 Communists free on bond are John B. Williamson, Jacob Stachel, Robert G. Thompson, Benjamin J. Davis, jr., Henry Winston, John Gates, Irving Potash, Gilbert Green, Carl Winter and Gus Hall. All, including Dennis but excepting Thompson, were given five years in jail. Thompson got three years.

In other actions yesterday, the Supreme Court:

1. Split, 4 to 4, and thereby upheld an 18-month prison term for Larry Gara, a Quaker teacher at Bluffton College, Ohio, for advising one of his students to stick to his position as a conscientious objector and not register under the peacetime draft law. Justice Clark took no part in the decision.

2. Agreed to consider a CIO union attack on a Wisconsin law banning strikes by public utility workers. The law also requires arbitration in public utility labor disputes. Involved is the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers Union.

3. Refused a second time to grant a hearing to two women members of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee convicted of contempt of Congress. The Government last May won in the Supreme Court a reversal of lower court rulings in favor of the two, Miss Helen R. Bryan and Mrs. Ernestina G. Fleischman, but the court then left unanswered some points raised. It was an appeal in these latter questions which was refused yesterday. The Government had won the contested points in the Court of Appeals.

The two women contended the House Un-American Activities Committee was unconstitutionally set up and that Government employes should not have been permitted to serve on the jury trying them in District Court here.

17 Seized as Red Control Unit Is Appointed by President

ganda. An effort will be made to deport them and also the 69 who still are being hunted.

Some of those arrested yesterday have been in the United States for 40 years and one has been evading deportation since 1932. Officials said all 86 have operated through labor unions, foreign language publications and "front" organizations to spread the Kremlin's doctrine.

List of Those Seized

Those arrested were:

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Peter John Warhol, 40, a Czechoslovakian, who served in the U. S. Army from 1944 to 1946 and was honorably discharged. Antonia Sentner, 43, a Yugoslav, in this country since 1914.

CROTON, N. Y.—Alexander Bittleman, 60, a Russian writer, who has been in the United States since 1912.

SAN FRANCISCO—Nathan Yanish, alias Noyach Yanishevsky, 41, a Russian who has been in this country since 1917. The department said he was a member of the Communist Political Association and the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade. Ernest Otto Fuchs, alias Fox, 44, a German, here since 1910. (No relation to Dr. Emil Klaus Fuchs, convicted British spy.)

NEW YORK—Franjo or Frank Borich, a Yugoslav, here since 1913. A labor organizer. Harry Yarin, 43, a Russian, who was indicted last January for falsely representing himself as a United States citizen. He is being held on Ellis Island. Andrew Dymtryshyn, 59, an Austrian, held at Ellis Island.

PHILADELPHIA — Vincent or Vinko Kemenovich, a Yugoslav, ordered deported in 1932.

CHICAGO—Moses Resnikoff, 64, a Russian, here since 1903. Vincent Andrulis, or Andrulewicz, 60, Lithuanian. Editor of the Lithuanian newspaper, "Vilnis." Carl Sklar, 49, a packinghouse worker.

SEATTLE—Ernesto Manzaoang, 48, native of the Philippine Islands, here since 1906. Boris Sassier, a bookstore operator, native of Russia.

LOS ANGELES—David Hyun, 33, Korean and citizen of China, here since 1924. Harry Carlile, 32, British citizen, here since 1917. The department said he taught Marxist doctrine in Communist party classes in Hollywood in 1948. Solomon Skolnich, 37, native of Poland, here since 1920.

Those arrested, called "very active Communists," will be jailed first, then transferred to Ellis Island to await deportation.

Under the new Communist-control law, they can be held in jail until six months after deportation orders are issued, or the Attorney General can release them on conditional parole or on bond.

They also may seek release on habeas corpus writs.

If their governments refuse to accept them, they can be deported to any other nation that would take them. But the Justice Department hopes the threat of jail sentences will influence the home governments to take them.

Seth Richardson, chairman of the new Control Board, is 70 and has a long record of government service. He has held posts under Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. In 1946, he served as chief counsel of the congressional committee that investigated the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Brown, 37-year-old Brooklyn attorney, was appointed special assistant to the chief of the Justice Department's Criminal Division in July, 1947, and since 1948 has served as special assistant to the Attorney General.

LaFollette, 51, served as a Republican from Indiana in the 78th and 79th Congresses.

Dr. McHale, 60, is a sister of Frank McHale, Democratic National Committeeman from Indiana. She has served on the faculties of Goucher College, Baltimore, and Columbia University and the University of Minnesota.

Goddaire, 52, a native of Haverhill, Mass., practiced law in his home State and formerly served as assistant State attorney general. He is a former member of the Maritime Commission.

Sen. Johnston Calls for Probe In U. S. Agency Use of Frank

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Nation's postmasters today heard Senator Johnston (D., S. C.) call for an investigation of the use of franking privileges by Federal agencies.

Johnston, chairman of the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, told more than 2500 listeners that he wanted itemized the extent to which Government agencies are using the frank "to ride the Postoffice Department into debt."

The Senator was the chief speaker to the postmasters in the first day of their convention here.

He said he intended to push a bill he has introduced to give postmasters higher pay through a population readjustment clause.

Johnston said he opposes the Hoover commission's recommendations that postmasters be selected from the ranks, adding that the present system of selection of the postmasters had worked well.

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson, who will be the principal speaker Thursday night at the convention, was himself a career worker in the Post Office Department. His appointment to his present post by President Truman broke a tradition of appointing party chieftains to the Postmaster Generalship.

Deputy Postmaster General Vincent C. Burke told the convention today of new procedures for handling money orders, parcel post shipments, and the department's accounting system.

Under the new money order system, which goes into effect in July, money orders will be cashed in any city, bank or postoffice, instead of in the city to which they are addressed.

Right Supports Free Nations, Harriman Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (NYHT)—The free nations of the world "possess a preponderance of economic and moral strength" as they gird themselves to oppose Communist imperialism, W. Averell Harriman, special assistant to the President, said tonight, at the first session of the nineteenth annual New York Herald Tribune forum.

If the task ahead is performed with resolution, he said, "we can look forward with confidence to the outcome."

Harriman, keynote speaker of the forum whose theme is "Mobilizing America's Strength for World Security," declared the strength of the moral position of the United States lies in the fact that it has made "every effort" to come to an amicable agreement with the Russians.

Joseph C. Grew, former Ambassador to Japan and chairman of the National Committee for a Free Europe, said Americans working together in the Crusade for Freedom "can and will eventually crash through the Iron Curtain."

Grew urged Americans to help prepare for "enlightened and enduring freedom," for the peoples in Russian-dominated nations upon their ultimate liberation.

Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said tonight that expansion of America's productive capacity is more important at this time than the imposition of controls upon the economy.

While "substantial" controls are necessary now, and more doubtless will come, disaster will come if the Nation "blindly" copies the full mobilization that occurred after the attack on Pearl Harbor, he warned.

The uncertain duration of the crisis confronting the country, Keyserling said, requires that its industrial power be made stronger "so that its economy may be able to withstand some later and greater crisis.

Since civilian efficiency and morale are essential for the defense effort, Keyserling said, care should be taken not to cut into the civilian economy drastically.

Keyserling said additional regulations allocating materials in short supply and limiting nonessential use of vital materials are in the cards, and that additional tax increases "far greater" than the $4,500,000,000 in fresh taxes already imposed were a likelihood.

Scientists' Ranks Infiltrated By Reds, McCarthy Charges

Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) said yesterday that "the rank of American scientists have been infiltrated to an alarming degree by the Communist enemies of the United States."

"This real threat to the Nation's security is a matter which has either been ignored by the Atomic Energy Commission or treated far too lightly by this vital administrative agency of the Government," he said in a statement published in an appendix to the Congressional Record.

McCarthy said that the performance of the Atomic Energy Commission with respect to communism "calls for a relentless examination."

As one example of what he called the "Communist infiltration of the ranks of science," McCarthy cited the election of Professor Kirtley Fletcher Mather of Harvard as 1951 president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

McCarthy said Mather "has been affiliated with upwards of 40 Communist front organizations," adding that "very few men in the academic world have a more flagrant record of supporting the causes of Stalin's fifth column in this country."

McCarthy asserted that the Federation of American Scientists is "heavily infiltrated with Communist fellow travelers" and observed that W. A. Higinbotham, a member of the AEC's Brookhaven National Laboratory staff, had served as its chairman.

Lyle Borst, another atomic scientist on the Brookhaven staff, was said by McCarthy to have "performed a distinct service for the enemies of the United States" by lending his name to what the Senator called a Communist gathering in New York last year.

McCarthy also accused Prof. Philip Morrison of Cornell University of affiliation with subversive organizations. He said Morrison is a nuclear physicist who took part in the design and fabrication of the atomic bomb at Los Alamos, N. Mex.

Another atomic scientist accused by McCarthy of collaboration with Communists was Prof. Harold C. Urey of the University of Chicago, a Nobel Prize winner who McCarthy identified as an administrator of AEC's Argonne Laboratory in Chicago. McCarthy said Urey "has in the past been affiliated with numerous Communist front organizations."

The Senator said that Prof. Linus Carl Pauling of the California Institute of Technology, who was president of the American Chemical Society last year, has a record of "support for Communist causes."

McCarthy also charged that radio station WQQW appears to be "completely under Communist control."

Vice President M. Robert Rogers of WQQW denied the allegation, saying McCarthy was quoting a repudiated 1946 report while the station has been under new management since 1947.

Gordon Dean, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, said, "It is deplorable that statements of the type made by Senator McCarthy tend to undermine confidence in the atomic energy program in defiance of the facts of a security record which speaks for itself."

Dr. Howard Meyerhoff, administrative secretary of the association for the advancement of science, called McCarthy's charges "utterly irresponsible."

At Cambridge, Mass., Professor Mather said McCarthy's statements were "absolutely erroneous." The professor added: "As far as my personal activity is concerned Mr. McCarthy and the country may feel quite safe."

In Chicago, Urey said, "as usual, Senator McCarthy doesn't know his facts . . . Since 1945, I have had nothing to do with secret work or the AEC.

At Ithaca, N. Y., Morrison said, "I belong to no subversive organizations and I maintain my right to write, speak and act independently and publicly, whatever Senator McCarthy thinks . . . When Senator McCarthy approves of my activities I shall have reason to be concerned about my patriotism."

In Pasadena, Calif., Pauling said: "I have been working in support of the international policy that would lead to peace and avert an atomic war, and I assume that is what the Senator is referring to."

Wisconsin Man Heads Inland Press Group

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Clifford G. Ferris, editor and general manager of the Rhinelander (Wis.) News, was elected president of the Inland Daily Press Association today.

Ferris, named at the association's sixty sixth annual meeting, succeeds Oscar S. Stauffer, editor and publisher of the Topeka (Kan.) State Journal. Ernest J. Kahler, general manager of the Sioux Falls (S. Dak.) Argus Leader, was elected vice president.

Australia Cracks Down On Red Party

CANBERRA, Australia, Oct. 23 (AP).—Federal Investigation Service men raided Communist headquarters, newspapers and homes of leaders today in the first move to implement Australia's new law outlawing the Communist Party and affiliated Red organizations.

The first raid occurred in Sydney, where officers took away several large bundles of documents and books to be examined and then sent to Canberra.

Simultaneously, Federal men moved in on the party offices in Darwin, Melbourne, Perth and Hobart. The Darwin raid took in the town's only newspaper.

The new law requires the Communists to dissolve their party and affiliated organizations and calls for confiscation of all party assets.

No arrests were made in the raids.

The scope of the first crackdown was limited under a high court injunction which the Communists obtained, forbidding enforcement of some provisions of the law. The injunction expires Wednesday but the Reds are expected to seek a continuance.

The law itself, authorizes the government to seize all Communist property and turn it over to an official receiver.

Blast Wrecks Mine Machines In Maryland

BARTON, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—A triple explosion which wrecked two pieces of strip mining equipment Sunday is being investigated by Maryland State Police and Garrett County authorities.

F. P. Gaither of Cumberland, operator of a non-union strip pit two miles north of here, said there was between $10,000 and $12,000 damage to his big power shovel and a bulldozer.

The explosion was heard in Lonaconing, six miles away.

Corpl. Samuel Conrad of the State Police said two explosive charges apparently had been attached to the power shovel and one to the bulldozer.

It was the third mystery explosion in the Barton coal field in the past year. The other two were at the Arthur P. Hoffa Coal Co. The first wrecked a conveyor belt running from a mine to a tipple. The other blew up a fan house.

Gaither said he had intended to move his power shovel to Oakland today. He had not actually mined much coal here recently.

18th Century Graters for Nutmegs Here

Christmas time and the eggnog season will find the Smithsonian Institution exceptionally well prepared.

It has recently received a collection of 16 eighteenth century nutmeg graters.

Nutmeg is now almost entirely confined to use on eggnog during the holiday season, but the gentlefolk of the eighteenth century apparently carried their pocket graters around with them and put the spice in almost everything they ate or drank.

On display in the Period Art and Textiles hall of the Natural History building, the 16 graters were the equivalent of present-day pocket cigaret lighters—which they greatly resemble in size and shape.

The custom of carrying nutmeg and a grater apparently started early in the eighteenth century when the East India spice trade had become well established and lingered on into the middle of the last century.

The 16 on display were collected by Mrs. Hariette H. H. Woodruff, of Hurst Pierpont, England.

Gaming Rife In County, Carr Charges

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23 (AP).—Thomas S. Carr said in a speech today that "there are more floating crap games, illegal bookies and after-hour spots running wide open in Prince Georges County than there are in Reno, where such operations are legal."

Carr, Republican nominee for Congress from the Fifth District, spoke at a State-wide meeting of the Federation of Republican Women. His opponent is Representative Lassdale G. Sasser (D., Md.).

Carr charged that law enforcement in the county has deteriorated so badly that the Federal Bureau of Investigation was forced to step in and investigate a murder that Prince Georges police said they could not solve.

He said the county was filled with gamblers.

He told the Republican women that three times in the last 72 hours he has received anonymous telephone calls warning him to stay out of the county.

Two were from men, and the other was from a woman, he said.

Carr said one of the men warned him to "lay off" the vice and crime situation.

However, he added, he plans to be in the county on Wednesday "from early morning to late at night."

went to the 14th st. apartment house to install a phone on the third floor.

They got a key to the apartment from Mrs. Derrell, the resident manager, who lives on the second floor. They finished the installation "right on" 2 p. m. and went back to Mrs. Derrell's apartment to return the key.

They said Mrs. Derrell followed them into the hall and asked them to take "this man" with them.

"He pulled a gun and said, 'No, you don't'," said Heflin. "He pulled her back into the doorway.

"We ran down the stairs and lit out. We heard two shots as we went," Gray said.

The repairmen said they leaped a high railing on the front porch of the house and "spilled tools all over" the lawn as they ran to summon police.

Mrs. Kathryn Kelleher, a third-floor resident of the building, said she heard a "commotion" downstairs. She said she heard what she thought was three shots and then heard Mrs. Derrell scream, "Help! Help!"

Mrs. Derrell, shot in the back and just below her left eye, staggered down a flight of stairs, leaving pools of blood behind her. When police arrived, she had collapsed on the steps in the first floor hall.

Police said that after Derrell shot his wife, he returned to her apartment and turned the gun on himself. Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, said the bullet entered Derrell's head back of his left ear. The gun was found at his feet.

Police said they found no note in the Derrell apartment and could only surmise that the couple had quarreled. Police said they had not been able to learn how long Derrell had been in his wife's apartment before he shot her.

They said he carried an "old fashioned" gun of .38-caliber with a load of five bullets. Three bullets had been fired.

Police said the couple had been estranged for the past three or four months. Officials at the Gordon Hotel said Derrell registered there on June 1.

A sister of Mrs. Derrell, reached by phone last night at Wellersburg, Pa., said she was Mrs. Derrell's "only relative." She is Mrs. Anna C. Witt. She said both Mr. and Mrs. Derrell were born in Wellersburg and that Derrell had been a "hotel man" most of his life.

She said the couple had been married for about 16 years. It was Mrs. Derrell's first marriage, Mrs. Witt said, but she added she believed Derrell had been married "several times" before.

Mrs. Witt said the couple had been Washington residents for about 10 years, during which time they had been custodians of the 14th st. property. She said that for about five or six years Mrs. Derrell also had worked as cashier in the coffee shop of the Statler Hotel. She left that job about six months ago.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night said he would issue a suicide certificate in Derrell's death.

crats gradually and continuously are "looting" county functions through the medium of Governor-appointed boards. He said that Democrats in the General Assembly have worked to build up "relentless opposition to county home rule."

Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who is a candidate to succeed himself as State's Attorney, fired no cannon. He simply asked the voters to compare the records of the Democratic candidates with those of the Republicans.

Mrs. Kathryn Lawlor, Republican candidate for the County Council, attacked the "wishy-washy" Democratic platform on zoning and said she favors "strict zoning regulations to prevent over-commercialization of the county" to which thousands of new families have been drawn. The Democrats, she declared, are supported principally by the large real estate dealers.

Mrs. Stella Werner, Democratic candidate for County Council, declared a "distressing anonymous telephone compaign which is telling voters that the Charter is an issue" and that the Democrats "will do away with the Charter."

Charges of "bossism" in the Democratic Party in the county were belittled by Mrs. Margaret Schweinhaut, wife of Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of the United States District Court and a candidate for the House of Delegates on the Democratic ticket.

She declared she would not be serving as a freely elected precinct captain nor as a candidate "if I felt I would in the future be subjected to bossism."

Attic Bonds May Bring $1500

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Mrs. Bonnie Walker's two Virginia bonds, which she believes should be worth at least $250,000, may not bring more than $1500—even if they are valid.

Tentative and unofficial calculations made in the State treasurer's office today disclosed that each of the $1000 bonds, which the 76-year-old Mrs. Walker says were dated in 1861 and which she found in her attic, may be redeemable for only about $745.

The Vinton woman says the bonds are of the pre-Civil War variety. If they were issued before Virginia seceded and joined the Confederacy in April, 1861, they still have some value. If they were issued during the war, they are worthless under provisions of the State and Federal constitutions.

Mrs. Walker reached her $250,000 estimate by calculating interest at 6 percent, compounded, from 1861 to the present.

But the State looks at it another way, saying it must consider such matters as a funding agreement between the State and bondholders of 1890-91, a pre-secession debt of 43 million dollars incurred when West Virginia was part of Virginia and a number of complicated economic formulae.

State Treasurer Jesse W. Dillon says the State will pay her what it owes. "But if they are invalidated by the Fourteenth Amendment, we can't secede from the Union again to pay her," he declared.

Mrs. Walker considers the Fourteenth Amendment a Yankee idea.

Court Upholds Perjury Guilt Of Maragon

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the perjury conviction of John F. Maragon, 58, the former White House habitue.

Unless the case is re-heard or appealed to the Supreme Court, the onetime shoe-shine boy will begin serving an eight to 24-month prison term given him at the District Court trial.

He was convicted of telling untruthful statements about his bank accounts when questioned by the Senate subcommittee investigating "five-percenter" contract brokers.

Maragon testified he had no bank account in 1945 or 1946 except one in the Union Trust Co. here. The Government proved, the court found, that he had "a substantial" account in San Antonio, Tex.

His lawyers said that the Government did not prove by two competent witnesses on the stand that the perjury was committed.

This was acknowledged, said Judge E. Barrett Prettyman, but he pointed out that it was enough that the evidence rested "upon an accumulation of uncontroverted documentary evidence" plus Maragon's identification and upon statements made by him.

It also was contended by Maragon that the trial court failed to amply instructions to the jury that the lying had to be willful to sustain a conviction. The Appeals Court denied that the judge had made an incorrect instruction.

Moscow Radio Reveals Lags In 5-Year Plan

LONDON, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Moscow radio admitted today that not all is going well under the present five-year plan, now in its last stage.

It listed three major shortcomings and failures in the fulfillment of the five-year program:

1. A number of important industries have remained behind the targets set.
2. Several sectors of Russia's economy have failed to improve the range and quality of industrial goods, despite previous admonitions.
3. This year's harvest has been disappointing; it has not gone beyond the level of last year's.

An official Moscow assessment of the fulfillment of the five-year plan in the third quarter of the current year—the next to last—today said the plan as a whole had been fulfilled by 103 percent.

But it also disclosed that "certain ministries failed to fulfill the plan as regards a number of types of output," and listed the following:

The ministry of chemical industry, the ministry of heavy engineering and the ministry of electrical industry, the ministry of transport engineering for certain types of turbines, the ministry of the automobile and tractor industry for automobile loaders, the ministry of building and road construction machinery for excavators, the ministry of agriculture for a number of agricultural machines."

The ministry of metallurgical industry was admonished for failing to "fulfill the output plan for iron and steel equipment and for not insuring the fulfillment of the plan for the range of ferrous metals."

This big EXTRA PRIZE if you ACT FAST!

Send your entry at once and qualify for a brand new 1951 FORD Convertible in addition to the big cash prizes. This big extra prize limited to contestants whose entries are postmarked before midnight, November 5, 1950. (In case of ties, Official Contest Rules apply.) You still have free right to send a substitute solution later; your best score, original or substitute, will count. ENTER TODAY!

IT'S FUN...IT'S FAST...JUST FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE INSTRUCTIONS

1. Identify the four pictures. Each is a five-letter word, and must total 50 by the Table of Letter Values. You score 5 points for each picture correctly identified.

2. Complete the lines beginning with the initials F-O-R-T-U-N-E with letters of your own choosing. Each line must spell a word; or you may spell two words in the same line if you leave an empty square between them. Each line must begin with the initial letter already printed on it. If two words are used in a line, however, the second word may begin with any letter. Words must have exactly the number of letters as there are squares on that line, except that a line containing two words or a hyphen will have one letter less because of the open square. Words need not be related; no word may be used more than once.

3. Each letter has the point value shown in the Table of Letter Values. Try to get a high score by choosing words that count the most. But there is another way to increase your score—an exciting BONUS feature.

4. The last square in each line is a BONUS square. Choose the correct name of any one of the pictures as your KEY word. Wherever a letter from your KEY word appears in a BONUS square it adds 15 points to your score. Each of the five letters of your KEY word can earn this bonus only once. BONUS points are in addition to the regular point value of the letter. You do not have to use all five letters of your KEY word; one of them will add 15 points, or two will add 30 points, etc.

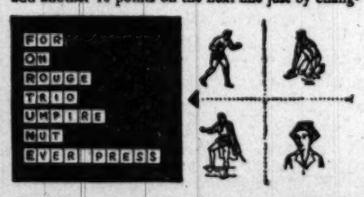
5. Enter your three scores—Picture Score; Word Score, including the values of the initial letters; and Bonus Score. Add them carefully and enter your TOTAL SCORE.

Solve this Sample with us

Suppose we have correctly identified the occupations of the persons pictured in the sample puzzle as boxer, mason, actor and nurse. (These samples need not total 50 letter-points, as do the Picture Words in the Official Puzzle.) This gives us a Picture Score of 20.

Now we fill in letters that will make words on each line and we begin by putting down those you see filled in on the sample. Adding up the point values of all the letters, we have a Word Score of 329.

Now let's see how that score can be improved. Take your pencil and begin. Let's change that first word FOR to FAR, because A counts 2 more than O. We can add another 10 points on the next line just by changing the word ON to OH. It's really fascinating to see how rapidly your score can be built up.



Notice how we filled in the last line with two words. We could have put down a single 10-letter word beginning with E and used all the squares. But by selecting two words, perhaps we can make a higher-scoring combination even though the blank square we must leave between our two words will not count at all. We put the blank square after the word ever; now our second word on the line could begin with any letter but it must be exactly five letters long. If we had made our first word every our second word could be only four letters long.

WATCH THOSE BONUS SQUARES: While we fill in our words, let's not forget the bonuses we can earn by using letters from our KEY word in the last squares of the lines. Remember, we can choose any one of the four pictures as our KEY word. In the BONUS squares we already have three of the five letters in boxer—O, E and R. (We cannot count the E twice because it appears only once in boxer.) However, if we make boxer our KEY word we have already earned 45 BONUS points. We can increase our score if we can use a B or an X in a BONUS square. Or perhaps other changes will make another KEY word even better. (In the Official Puzzle, of course, the KEY words are different.)

You'll find it's easy and real fun to improve your score, to play this fascinating puzzle like a game. Be sure to send your entry in time to qualify for that 1951 Ford Convertible.

OFFICIAL RULES OF THE CONTEST

1. $100,000 in cash has been deposited in the Chase National Bank and will be awarded according to Official Rules, Instructions and Prize List to the contestants achieving the highest scores in the Official Puzzle solutions.

2. A contestant may enter any one, two or all three Prize Groups by sending the appropriate contribution with his solution form. ($2 for the first Group, $5 for the second, and $10 for the third.) Having entered the Contest, any contestant may enter another Group or Groups by sending in, before the closing date, the additional sum or sums necessary.

3. Each Prize Group will be judged separately. The highest valid score in Group 1 wins the First Prize, the second highest valid score achieves the Second Prize and so on until all the prizes in the Group have been awarded. The solutions in Groups 2 and 3 will be similarly judged and the prizes awarded. A contestant may win prizes in more than one Group with the same solution.

4. This contest being nationwide, there are likely to be ties. If there are ties, then before any prizes are awarded for lower scores in a Group there will be reserved as many prizes as there are tied contestants in that Group. To break the ties a set of 5 tie-breaking puzzles will be sent to each tied contestant. The Judges will first judge the solutions submitted on Puzzle No. 1 of such set. If the ties are not thereby all broken, the Judges will judge the solutions of Puzzle No. 2 of the remaining tied contestants and so on to Puzzle No. 5, if necessary. If the ties are not all broken by the first set of tie-breaking puzzles, a second, third and, if necessary, a fourth set of 5 tie-breaking puzzles each, may be used. Each contestant will be required to have his solutions to the tie-breaking puzzles postmarked within a limited time to be established by the Committee on Awards, which shall be not less than 14 days nor more than 18 days from the date of mailing, in the case of the first set of tie-breaking puzzles, and not less than 5 days nor more than 7 days for each additional set of tie-breaking puzzles required.

The tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to but more difficult than the original puzzle. Pictures or subjects for identification may be more numerous and less common; more and longer words may be required; the letters supplied will not necessarily be the initial letters of the words; and alternative tables of letter values and bonuses may be included. If final ties remain after the fourth set of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which tied.

5. The contest is open to residents of the continental United States except employees of War Orphans Scholarships, Inc. and its contest associates, including its advertising agency, or members of their families. Anyone who has won $500 or more in cash or kind in any other puzzle contest prior to entering this contest, and any member of his or her family, is also excluded. We shall make every effort to enforce this rule. Each entry must bear a permanent home address in the continental United States to which all contest mail will be sent. We regret that this contest is not open to members of The Armed Forces on active duty, because of uncertain mail delivery. War Orphans Scholarships, Inc. should be notified immediately of any change in address, but in no case can it assume responsibility for delivery of mail. Only one member of an immediate family living at the same address may compete.

6. All solutions must be submitted on an Official Entry Form. One Substitute Solution may be submitted without additional contribution, but only on the Official Substitute Form which will be sent, with an official entry number, to each contestant. Where more than one entry is submitted (each contestant may submit more than one entry if appropriate contribution is sent) the contestant's highest valid score will be considered in that Group or Groups only in which that solution is entered. A contestant may win only one prize in each Prize Group. A contestant will not receive a higher score than claimed nor more than earned. Neatness does not count, but unsigned, illegible or unclear entries will not be accepted and all contributions accompanying such entries will be returned upon request after judging is completed.

7. Any word that fits may be used to fill in the squares (and to identify the pictures correctly) provided the word used appears in boldface type as a complete vocabulary entry in the Merriam-Webster New International Dictionary, Unabridged, Second Edition (a 1947 or subsequent printing), on any page (Upper or Lower Section) within the Main Alphabetical Section of said dictionary. Abbreviations, contractions, word elements such as a prefix, suffix, or combining form, single letters of the alphabet, and parts of phrases such as suey in chop suey, are inadmissible unless they are also separately listed elsewhere in such section as independent words. A hyphenated word that fits may be used but each hyphen must occupy a square and such square will be without value. Two words may be used in any line of squares but the two words must be separated by a blank square which will be without value, and each word must separately comply with this rule.

8. All entries must be sent by mail to: AMERICAN WAR ORPHANS CONTEST, Washington 13, D. C., and must be postmarked before midnight, November 30, 1950, and received before 5 p.m., December 15, 1950, to be eligible for consideration. However, sixty extra days are allowed for mailing and receiving of substitute solutions and of additional contributions to qualify for or transfer to another Group or Groups. War Orphans Scholarships, Inc. will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical or mechanical errors. By sending in the entry each contestant agrees to be bound by the Official Rules and Instructions and, in any event, by the decision of the Committee on Awards on any and all matters affecting the contest.

Arlington Sewage

Chairman Daniel Dugan of the Arlington County Board has given welcome reassurance, in his letter published in this newspaper recently, that "Arlington will do its full share to clean up the Potomac as rapidly as possible." We had criticized Mr. Dugan's earlier statement that the board would not be pushed into a referendum on additional sewage treatment facilities at the November 7 general election and his comment that Arlington was doing "pretty well" in comparison with other communities. The timing of the referendum now has been resolved by a petition sponsored by the Izaak Walton League which definitely places the question of a $2,617,000 sewage treatment plant bond issue on the November 7 ballot. We are glad that Mr. Dugan, speaking for the board, hopes the issue will be approved by the voters.

The matter is one which demands more than academic interest on the part of the County Board. Arlington voters have a big burden to shoulder. In addition to the sewage treatment plant, they will be asked to approve a $7,450,000 bond issue for new schools on November 7. Both issues are essential, and the danger is that voters may be misled into thinking that they may choose one or the other and still meet Arlington's pressing needs.

Much has been said about the school problem, and the need now is to focus equal attention on the pollution of the Potomac River which, in the words of District Engineer Kemp, threatens to become an "open sewer" endangering the health of everyone in the area. Arlington now gives primary treatment to half its sewage; the other half —equivalent to the refuse from a city of 67,000 persons—is dumped raw into the Potomac. The proposed bond issue is designed to enable Arlington to give primary treatment to all its sewage. Even this is not enough; primary treatment removes solids but allows effluent to flow into the river which still causes pollution and endangers marine life. Arlington really needs facilities similar to those being built in the District to give complete treatment to its sewage, but the primary treatment plant will be a necessary first step.

If for any reason the bond issue should fail at the polls, the Virginia Water Control Board would have the power to prevent Arlington from dumping any additional raw sewage into the Potomac. Such a ban would be an extremely serious impediment to new building in Arlington. The facts need to be explained thoroughly to the voters and the County Board ought to take an active part in presenting those facts.

U. S. As An Importer

Last August monthly merchandise imports into the United States topped exports for the first time since June, 1937. This closing of the dollar trade gap with the emergence of an important surplus is the result of a trend that has been in evidence for some time. During every month of the current year imports have been somewhat higher than in the corresponding month of 1949, while exports have been lower. The steady shrinkage of our so-called favorable trade balance is, therefore, due to a combination of rising imports and declining exports. And of the two factors the decline in exports has been a much more important cause of the shrinkage, although August imports spurted upward to a record level, almost 50 percent above the 1949 monthly average.

The probability is that for some time to come imports will remain at present high levels and possibly exceed exports. However, as The Washington Post said a few weeks ago in an editorial on The Vanishing Dollar Gap, the sharp rise in prices of such imports as coffee, rubber, and wool, as well as increased buying of foreign products needed for defense, cannot be considered a permanent source of income by other countries "unless we assume that world peace is a dim goal unattainable for many years to come." Furthermore, Europe's own rearmament program will cut down its dollar exports as the program expands, since more manpower and materials will have to be diverted to arms production for internal use instead of production of goods for export. Consequently, the dollars accumulated by countries that are selling us high priced strategic materials for armaments and stockpiling will be offset to an indeterminate extent by dollars lost through reduction of other export items.

It has also to be kept in mind that our export trade is heavily subsidized, and that foreign nations have also imposed severe restrictions on imports of American goods in an effort to conserve scarce dollars. Any reduction in the amount of dollar foreign aid would, therefore, tend for the time being further to reduce United States exports. At present the chances are that the total amount of dollar aid (including aid for rearming) will not be increased, and may be reduced, next year. Moreover, the United States has already imposed severe export restrictions on cotton shipments and others may follow. Whether or to what extent these restrictions will be offset by increased buying of other American goods is anybody's guess.

The change of emphasis—from recovery to mobilization for defense—has given rise to trade shifts that are abnormal in the sense that they do not reflect a return to the sort of stabilized world trade that was the aim of the recovery program.

Suppressed Report

President Quirino's suspension of habeas corpus rights in the Philippines is a discouraging symptom of the demoralization that is spreading through the island republic. The Quirino regime is fearful that agitators may cause an uprising. That is no idle fear. The weakness of the government in coping with the Hukbalahaps has been amply demonstrated. The tragic aspect of the situation is that President Quirino is now striking at civil liberties instead of moving against the incompetence and corruption that are fanning the flames of revolt.

However essential emergency measures may be, they are likely to hasten the disintegration unless the root causes of disaffection are removed. The ugly truth is that the Quirino regime is bankrupt both morally and financially. Graft and corruption have reached staggering proportions, and the leading culprits appear to be so close to the President that he is unable or unwilling to oust them. Fortunes have been made from the admission of immigrants. The faking of records, evidence, and affidavits to enable alleged guerillas to collect back pay from the United States smells to high heaven. One fake guerilla leader is said to have obtained more than $600,000 for men who had nothing to do with the resistance movement during the Japanese occupation. Vast sums entrusted to the government's numerous corporations also appear to have found their way into the pockets of favored individuals.

While extravagant spending has run riot, the government has been unbelievably negligent in the collection of taxes. Foreign corporations appear to be paying their taxes, but the Quirino regime has not had the strength or the courage to compel Filipino firms to meet their obligation to the government. As a result, the government faces an appalling fiscal crisis, with many public employes going unpaid. In the face of this critical situation capital has been fleeing the country at a time when the Philippine Republic is urgently in need of investment capital from abroad.

The dangers inherent in this situation were recognized in both Manila and Washington when the mission headed by Daniel W. Bell, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, went to the islands in July and August. Since its return the Filipino people and their many friends in this country have been watching eagerly for the mission's report. Last week both groups were amazed by President Truman's comment that the report will not be released for some time, if it ever is. The statement appears to have aroused widespread fears among the Filipinos that the United States is washing its hands of their problem. The result is likely to be a quickened tempo of demoralization.

Everyone takes it for granted that the report is critical. But it is also reasonable to suppose that it carries constructive recommendations, and both the Filipino and American people have a right to know what they are. It is a gravely mistaken notion that a crisis such as that mounting in Manila can be met by suppression of unpleasant facts. This sort of policy tends to encourage the smothering of civil rights and the substitution of dictatorial controls for the consent of the governed. It tends to postpone remedial action until an explosion is inevitable. Unless this report soon comes to light, the Filipinos' confidence in Washington is likely to sag along with their confidence in their own government.

Unifying Korea

Sources close to Syngman Rhee have intimated that the Rhee government is willing to accept the United Nations plan for temporary government of North Korea. This is newsworthy only because it previously had appeared as if President Rhee might flout the U. N. resolution on interim government by sending South Korean "governors" into the newly liberated territory.

From the way the military situation looks now, the five provinces of North Korea may be ready for the restoration of civil government very soon—though guerilla disturbances may require the presence of U. N. troops for some time to come. Because of the difficulties inherent in the restoration of order, the wisest course would be to supplant strictly military government with locally elected officials as areas are pacified. Initially, too, seats reserved for North Korea in the National Assembly can also be filled by the same process.

Such a procedure, however, is justified only as an interim step in unification, for in a sense it would incorporate North Korea into a government for which it has never voted. Hence the requirement for a true nation-wide election as soon as this is practicable. Meanwhile, the Rhee government has an opportunity to demonstrate its ability to cope with problems of unification. Aside from relief and the restoration of fiscal stability, land reform is likely to be the biggest headache. In North Korea the much-heralded Communist land reform program was essentially phony, because individuals were not given title to land. In the south foes of Dr. Rhee probably have painted the picture blacker than it really was. Some division of Japanese holdings was carried out under American military occupation; and the Assembly had passed a sweeping reform law which would have ended most land tenancy. This was scheduled to take effect, however, just as the invasion occurred, and actually it was never implemented. The matter of straightening out land titles and pressing forward with a land program consonant with present needs is one that would tax the ingenuity of any government.

The United Nations interest in all this, aside from assuring a climate for rehabilitation, is to see that the aggression is quelled for good, that the artificial division of Korea is ended and that the people have a free choice. The U. N. concern thus is one of principle, and not of support for Dr. Rhee as the heir-apparent to a unified Korea. The Rhee government can best justify its capacity to preside over the interim government by cooperating with the U. N. and refraining from arbitrary acts toward North Korea.

U. N. Day

Few speeches have been awaited more eagerly throughout the world than President Truman's today before the General Assembly of the United Nations. This is U. N. Day. So the President is likely to pay tribute to an idea which, though as old as the Amphictyonic League in the fourth century, is still in the throes of organization. The idea, of course, is peace founded on justice as the political object of mankind. As we strive to perfect the organizational development of that idea, it is important to remember that the United Nations has no life apart from ourselves. If it fails, we have failed; if it succeeds, we have succeeded. In other words, we all have an inescapable responsibility for the world body, and those who pursue an independent let alone a selfish policy toward the United Nations are thus frustrating its purposes.

It won't be enough, however, for the President to testify to the solidarity of mankind in ending what the Charter calls "the scourge of war." As a realist Mr. Truman cannot ignore the inter-Titan fissure which keeps all the member nations on tenterhooks. Mr. Truman if he refers to it needs, however, to choose his words carefully. He is still confused, for instance, about the identification of the enemy of the general peace. In his last speech, at San Francisco, he named Communist imperialism—an inexact designation, and an inept one. Some of his hearers today will be Communists who are either overtly or covertly anti-Stalinist. They are what George F. Kennan calls the "lost souls" we should be seeking to liberate and redeem. Actually the enemy is Soviet imperialism.

This is not to suggest any tirade against the Soviet Union in the United Nations. Maximum value out of the presidential appearance will be obtained only by a positive stand about the American purpose. In this newspaper's view the approach should dovetail with the idea back of the ringing of the Freedom Bell in Berlin and elsewhere. The United Nations was founded to "reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights" as well as to secure peace and justice. Men who are free need to assure men who are in chains that they are not forgotten.

In every human heart there is the same yearning for liberty. It springs as naturally to the Russia of Pushkin and Tolstoy as to the America of Jefferson and Lincoln. Boris Shub's book, The Choice Before Us, testifies that this revolutionary tradition in Russia can be evoked with effect in the conflict with Soviet imperialism. For many people there know that the oligarchs of the Kremlin have betrayed that noble tradition. There would be no better platform than the United Nations for addressing the men who want to be free as well as the men who are free.

Older Workers

Massachusetts is embarking on a new experiment in social legislation by forbidding discrimination against workers in the 45 to 65 age group. While the policy of refusing to hire workers solely because of their age is socially wasteful and should be discouraged, we doubt the efficacy of attempts at legislative enforcement of this sort of nondiscriminatory policy. For if employers do not choose to hire older workers, they can usually find reasons other than age for their rejection.

However, in the present tight labor market the Massachusetts commission that enforces the Fair Employment Practices Act will probably have little trouble persuading most employers that it is to their advantage to hire able-bodied older people. For some kinds of work, in fact, older experienced employes are better fitted than younger men and women. And, in addition to the social problems created by the practice of discriminating against them, their rejection results in a failure to make full use of our manpower resources and realize our productive potentialities.

The test of Massachusetts' new law will come when employment is declining and employers are in a position to pick and choose. Meantime, if older workers are hired under the pressure of labor shortages and put in unsuitable jobs, the result may be to prejudice their cause and bring about a reactionary emphasis on the assumed superiority of younger workers. That happened after World War II and it may happen again unless the hiring of older workers is accompanied by their selective placement in jobs adapted to their years and capacity.

United Nations Day

Five years ago the United Nations came into being. Its purpose, as stated in the preamble to the Charter signed by delegates from 50 countries on June 26, 1945, at the San Francisco conference and ratified by 60 countries since then, is "to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war . . . to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person . . . to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom . . . and for these ends . . . to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples . . ."

The swords have not as yet been beaten into ploughshares, nor the spears into pruning hooks. But the United Nations, and more particularly, its specialized agencies, including the World Health Organization; the Food and Agriculture Oragnization; the International Children's Emergency Fund; the International Labor Organization; the International Refugee Organization; and the Educational, Social and Cultural Organization, offer eloquent testimony to the fact that it is possible for the nations of all continents—both large and small—to live and work together in mutual cooperation and assistance and trust.

The same spirit that has been made manifest in the international endeavors through the U.N. and its specialized agencies in overcoming famine and flood, pestilence and disease, illiteracy and ignorance will some day be of avail in overcoming the most deadly of all diseases—the man-made disease of war.

In celebrating this United Nations Day on October 24, it would be well for the nations to contemplate the miracles that could be performed if only the way could be found to use for international health and happiness and collaboration, the billions of dollars and the human effort and ingenuity that are still being used for the production of the implements of war and destruction.

Black Hole Of Calcutta

Marquis Childs, discussing the end of European imperialism in Asia, wrote on October 20: "No longer is it possible to . . . crowd them (a thousand natives) into a black hole in Calcutta to suffocate."

I would be interested to discover what incident he is referring to. Usually, the phrase "black hole in Calcutta" refers to an action of Surajah Dowlah, the eighteenth century Indian ruler of Bengal. In 1756, he seized Calcutta and crammed 145 captured Englishmen and a single half-caste woman into a room 18 feet long by 14 feet wide. All day the prisoners begged for more air and water. The following morning only 23 were still alive. The half-caste woman, only "native" in the Black Hole, was among the survivors.

Everybody realizes that there is much that is discreditable in Britain's record in India. But let's keep the facts straight. Indians committed atrocities, too.

Edna St. Vincent Millay

So often forgetfulness shrouds the leave-taking of many of our great artists who gave it much of its beauty. Such another death now comes to our notice. Edna St. Vincent Millay has left us.

Deep in the earth she now will rest, and no longer will she awaken to see spring-silver and autumn-gold, and watch the blue again after the storm. No longer will she witness the New England autumn and the pageant of spring and summer pass by.

Already there is vivid color in the marshes; the maples in the hills, flaming against the russet of age-old elms, are more brilliant this year than ever before. Could it be that Nature, with her sensitive prescience, foresaw the passing of one of her most ardent worshipers and staged for her a glorious tribute to her understanding heart?

"The Woolly Pandit"

There are many things about The Washington Post which its readers appreciate and admire. Not the least of these are the thought-provoking articles so often found in its editorial section. No group in the community reads this page more carefully than members of the District branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Sometimes our point of view differs widely from that expressed in your columns, yet we are grateful for the careful way in which you usually interpret and analyze the events of the day.

It was with a profound sense of shock, therefore, that we read your editorial of October 18. "The Woolly Pandit." It is not surprising that Westerners fail to understand Mr. Nehru or even, understanding him, fail to agree with him. But to brush his ideas off as if he were a well-intentioned adolescent is a dangerous and alarming position for non-Asiatics to take.

Mr. Nehru is the leading statesman of Asia, seeking to be our friend, and he knows Asia as few Americans do. Have we so many friends among the leaders of Asia that we can afford to talk in this cavalier fashion about one of them? Can there be no honest difference of opinion which still maintains an attitude of respect toward those with whom we differ? If a nation fails to see eye to eye with American policy, must its leadership be accused of impracticality and naivete?

As readers of The Post, we feel that such an editorial indicates a complete lack of understanding of the people and problems of Asia.

Racial Alikeness

Joseph P. B. Barber's letter of October 14 was primarily intended to deal with the question of segregation in the District schools. Its author, however, wandered off on a rather senseless tangent. He began by saying that God segregated the people of the earth at the beginning. Perhaps he has forgotten the man of original Creation, Adam.

I am also wondering how a person with any kind of rational thinking can refute the findings of modern science which prove that a black man is no different physically or mentally from a white, yellow, or red man.

GUY SHERMAN, Jr.
Washington.

It is to be hoped that all "white" Americans who sincerely share the theological - anthropological views expressed in the letter of Mr. Barber set to work at once to compensate for the sins of their ancestors who sought "to undo God's work." They should make immediate plans for return to Europe, the continent designed by their God for their perpetual residence.

Case Of Lieut. Gilbert

I am sure that the death sentence imposed on Lieut. Leon A. Gilbert, related in your October 15 issue, is a gross miscarriage of justice, and I wish that you would do everything in your power to see that this officer is given a new trial, conducted not in the heat of battle and the tense conditions that battle creates, but back in a rear area or in the United States. If a new trial is impossible, then I would ask that you intercede with the President to have Lieutenant Gilbert's sentence commuted.

We have proven traitors in our country who have received far lighter sentences than this for a crime that was more traitorous than a refusal to obey a field order under the most strenuous circumstances.

Karen Minority Revolt In Burma

In your issue of October 13, I saw a news item under the headline, "Burma Surgeon Goes on Trial." This item contained the following passage: "The Karens, estimated to number two million, constitute one of a number of rebel movements against the Burmese government. They have concentrated on the issue of self-rule, and their revolt, like the Hindu-Moslem difference in India, is marked by racial and cultural characteristics."

This passage would suggest that all the Karens in Burma are in revolt against the goverment. This is far from being the case. The revolt has been confined to the militant Karen organization known as the Karen National Defense Organization (KNDO). Membership of this organization has at no time exceeded 5 percent of the total Karen population. The remainder have had no part in the revolt and have remained loyal to the government of Burma.

It is true that the Karens, taken as a whole, aspire to a Karen state within the Burma Union similar to the Shan and Kachin states which are already in existence. The principle of such a state has already been accepted by the government of Burma, and the majority of the Karens only desire peaceably to work out the details relative to the establishment of this state with the government of the Union of Burma. Indeed, work on this had already begun but has unfortunately been retarded by the senseless insurrection begun by the KNDO.

As for the suggestion that the revolt has a religious and cultural basis, I should like, as a Karen myself, to point out that this is equally misleading.

The 95 percent loyal to the government comprise Buddhists and Christians; in fact, both the two Karen members of the Union government are Christians. Membership of the KNDO is equally not confined to any one religion.

With regard to culture, the position is that there is no fundamental difference between the culture of the Karens taken as a whole and that of the majority Burmese race.

The KNDO revolt was merely an attempt by a small misguided minority, taking advantage of the weakened position of the government of Burma, as a result of the Communist rebellion, and abusing the trust which had been reposed in them by that government (some KNDO elements were armed by the government), to overthrow the government by force. Viewed in this light, the revolt is no different from that of the Communists, and this, perhaps, explains the numerous recorded instances of collaboration between the KNDO and the Communists since the commencement of the revolt.

How India Looks At Us

By Marquis Childs

Fear Of Colonialism

NEW DELHI, India.—Anyone who looks for sure answers to large questions in this vast country is bound to be frustrated. All the big, easy generalizations have a hollow sound.

The belief of many American observers is that there is a strong anti-American current in India today, reflecting a feeling that is spreading throughout Asia. Whether this is true or not the passing visitor can scarcely judge. Certainly I have been treated with all possible courtesy and given every facility to try to learn what is taking place here.

The anti-American feeling is in part, at least, a reflection of the tension between Russia and the United States. Ironically enough, it may have been fed by the victory of United States forces in Korea. It was much easier to like us when we were being pushed almost into the sea and when the intentions of organized Communist aggression were so obvious.

Once again America emerges as the all-powerful giant with a rearmament program that will put military might on an actual rather than a potential basis, as it was in 1945. And Indians, both in business and in government, are constantly being reminded of America's power.

By contrast, they never see any Russians at all. The Russian Embassy staff never attends any except top-level functions. They are confined almost entirely to the embassy buildings and when they do go it is usually in a body, as though they were children under the eye of a teacher.

ON THE SURFACE at least, their propaganda is mild enough. Handsomely illustrated books on the USSR can be purchased in the book shops for very little. They are subsidized, of course, by the Soviet Union. Heavy emphasis has been put in the propaganda aimed at India on Russia's peaceful intentions.

A sympathetic background exists for such a propaganda. Many educated Indians are inclined to the view held by wishful-thinking fellow travelers in America in the 'thirties. They have read of the achievements of Russia's five-year-plans, of the vast increase in literacy, in medicine and so on—all things that the educated Indian wants for his own people.

But above all they have been impressed by reports of the transformation worked by the Soviet Union among long oppressed and often primitive peoples of Central Asia. Soviet propaganda has widely advertised that these people were given new status and encouraged for the first time to work toward higher standards.

Here is the real pull—the fellow feeling of a people long oppressed and only just recently come to nationhood. Colonialism is the villain that the sensitive Indian sees everywhere. His attitude toward America is colored by suspicion of "economic imperialism" to be imposed by "Wall Street." The sensational segment of the press shrieks this warning in headlines and cartoons. The inflammatory press, and often even conservative newspapers, play up the race problem in America with emphasis on conflict and discrimination.

AMERICA'S stand in Indo-China, backing the French and their puppet emperor, Bao Dai, is considered colonialism and nothing else. The French are resisting the national aspirations of the Indo-Chinese. By so doing they are giving communism an opportunity to ride the high tide of Asian nationalism. That is how it looks from here where a new government is still acutely and sensitively conscious of the rights and privileges of independence.

What is truly startling is to find the once-hated British winning an acceptance that almost no one would have dreamed possible 10 years ago. The reasons for this are fairly apparent. Ties of sentiment and education with Great Britain have existed for a very long time. After all, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru was educated at Harrow and Cambridge and he has in many respects the upper class British point of view on matters both cultural and political.

Then there is the fact that Britain today is second in power to the USSR and the United States. In some respects it is true that America is paying the penalty of power in Asia today.

But when all this has been said, the British get full marks for their skill, their patience in statecraft. As one American official here put it:

"They've learned how to take things that irritate and annoy us. We are inclined to be too impatient."

If power is to be used wisely, it must be used with understanding and, above all, with patience. That goes particularly for this part of the world where time has quite a different meaning from what it has in the West.

U. N. Flag

This is an answer to the October 19 letter of Ben Floyd, chairman of the American Veterans Committee Chapter 5. Mr. Floyd stated that the American people laughed at the charges of Veterans of Foreign Wars National Commander Rauls made against the Department of Agriculture over display of the United Nations flag.

These people aren't Americans. They are American Quislings. They do not respect the American flag. I say there is only room for one flag and that is the American flag to be flying over our schools and public buildings.

The Schuman Plan

By Maurice Duverger

(Mr. Duverger is a special writer for Le Monde of Paris.)

II: An Anti-Cartel Mechanism

COMMUNIST propaganda attacks the Schuman Plan on two principal grounds — economic and social. It asserts, on the one hand, that the plan will encourage the rebuilding of cartels which will be even stronger than before as a result of the prerogatives of the High Authority under public law. It warns, on the other hand, that the plan will serve to close down marginal producers, and, consequently, increase unemployment. It should be noted in passing that these two objections are contradictory, for the elimination of the weakest firms would result from the competition that cartels are designed to suppress.

Talk of the rebuilding of cartels shows an utter ignorance of the existing situation in the steel and coal markets, for the cartels are already rebuilt. The problem is not to rebuild cartels but to suppress them.

What is the system of double prices, one domestic, one foreign, if not a cartel practice? What is the apportionment of orders among the various producers of a common group, if not a cartel practice? What is the establishment of a single basing point for all firms, regardless of their geographical locations (calculated as if from Thionville for French steel producers), if not a cartel practice? And what is it when an efficient enterprise slows production to permit an inefficient enterprise behind schedule to survive, if not a cartel practice?

THE CARTEL system obviously functions to the detriment of the public interest. Thanks to it, factories badly equipped, badly managed, badly located, are kept alive, since the cartel price is carefully calculated so as to guarantee their survival. On the other hand, the modern concerns benefit from an inflated profit margin, which permits them to increase management expenses and leads to waste. The whole system is opposed to economic progress. The consumer is bled white to permit the less efficient to survive and the more efficient to get rich, both at the expense of the community. Productivity stands still, since producers either refuse to modernize or direct their modernization solely toward increased profits.

Such is the present situation. The first objective of the Schuman Plan is to put an end to it, to replace this Malthusian economy by an economy of progress, to supplant this economy which serves the producers by an economy which serves the community.

The plan involves, in sum, the progressive suppression of the obstacles of economic freedom established in the special interests of individual enterprises or of individual states, so as to reestablish the conditions necessary to genuine competition and to assure that such conditions will subsist. Far from forming a new cartel, or even from strengthening cartels already existing, the Schuman Plan seeks their destruction and the creation of an organism which cannot be better named than an "anti-cartel," since its purpose is precisely the opposite of that pursued by cartels.

IT IS certain that this "anti-cartel," in reestablishing competition, will tend to drive out of business some marginal producers—that is to say those with high prices—for competition is nothing but a natural mechanism for eliminating the less efficient, to the benefit of the more efficient. Does that mean that one must fear the closing of numerous factories with the risk of bringing about considerable unemployment? No.

No, first because the plan provides for transition measures to permit the inefficient to catch up, provided that they shed their complacency and their laziness and get in tune with contemporary production. The High Authority will furnish them the means by putting at their disposal the necessary capital for modernization and by controlling its use. (Think of the immense international credit possibilities that a European High Authority for coal and steel would have.) For the plan seeks not to close down enterprises, but to modernize them. Instead of seeking the lowest common level based on the most antiquated and least productive firm, as does the cartel system, the plan seeks to reach the highest common level based on the most productive and best-equipped firm.

Only those enterprises which, because of their geographic location, their structure as a whole, or the incompetence of their management, are truly unprofitable, will be finally eliminated. That means very few. Their personnel should find work with other firms without difficulty because of the general development of production which is the fundamental objective of the plan. One of the functions of the High Authority will be the development of a reemployment system.

PROTESTS cannot be reasonably made against such industrial weeding out. The process is indispensable if general productivity—and that means the standard of living of all Europeans and the working class particularly—is to be raised. To protect enterprises which are badly equipped, badly organized, badly located, is to nourish parasites on the economic organism which drain its vitality and condemn the people of Europe to mediocrity.

One can cite numerous examples of this absurd policy in all too many countries of the Old World. In one place, the government buys products which the consumers do not want in order to satisfy producers (instead of letting competition force them to change their production); in another the government forces industries needing only 1000 workers to employ 1200 in producing only the same quantity of merchandise in order to fight unemployment (instead of developing new enterprises which would employ this extra labor). Not the least virtue of the Schuman Plan is that it does away with such folly and sets Europe on the path of economic progress which is likewise the path of social well-being.

Californians Will Vote Nov. 7 on Legalizing Gambling

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—Californians will have a chance on November 7 to vote "yes" or "no" on the question of making all forms of gambling legal.

On the ballot it will be listed as Proposition No. 6.

In this fabulous State, they never do things by halves, and so we find Proposition No. 6 sharing the news with Gamblers Anonymous.

GA, as it is called for short, is patterned after Alcoholics Anonymous, and has as its aim the cure of chronic crap shooters, horse players and blackjack addicts. A blended program of religion and psychiatry is counted on to help those who throw away the rent money on games of chance. As with recovered drinkers in AA, recovered gamblers in GA act as friendly counselors in helping others to overcome temptation.

No Middle Ground in Fight

As for Proposition No. 6, this has kicked up a row in which there seems to be no middle ground.

Those who favor it say licensed gambling would cut taxes 25 percent, improve law enforcement and help the "old folks" through pensions. Opponents say it is a "sordid scheme" that would encourage big-time crime, corrupt youth and in no way help the aged.

Briefly, Proposition No. 6 would amend the California constitution to permit wagering in licensed establishments. A five-man commission would issue licenses, take a "cut" on card games, dice games, roulette and the like, and put the revenue into a pension and welfare fund for the aged and the blind.

"Ham-'n'-Eggs" Folk for It

The concern shown for the "old folks" in the proposed amendment is significant.

Those promoting the scheme, it has been brought out, include some of the men who were behind the "Ham-'n'-Eggs" — $30 every Thursday — pension plan that was voted down in the late 1930s.

The most extraordinary feature of Proposition 6 is this: It contains the names of the five $10,000-a-year men who would make up the commission. Two of them, Willis Allen and Roy G. Owens, are former "Ham-'n'-Eggers." The Governor and the Legislature would have no say in the original six-year appointments.

An investigating committee, representing the California Senate, has shown that at least one slot-machine operator has made a contribution to the organization behind Proposition 6, hoping for preferment if the scheme goes through.

Compared to Arizona

This, however, seems petty stuff compared to what happened down in neighboring Arizona, where the electors also are about to vote on a measure to legalize gambling.

Dan E. Garvey, governor of Arizona, told about the incident when he was in San Francisco recently. He said he was offered $200,000 to appoint "the right man" to be gambling czar if Arizona voters approve licensed gambling November 7.

"I told the go-between," said 65-year-old Governor Garvey, "that I would punch the briber in the nose if he would come into my office."

In neighboring Nevada, gambling has been open and legal for a long time. The system of licensing, however, is very much different from that proposed in California. Gambling in Nevada is regulated by a commission which, by law, must include spokesmen for banking, mining, livestock, agricultural and business interests. The Governor also is a member. All serve without pay.

He'd Pay $100,000 For Job

Nevada gamblers are reported to be watching the California situation with much interest. Commenting on the California plan to have gambling regulated by a commission of five $10,0000-a-year men, one Reno impresario said:

"Why, I'd pay the State of California $100,000 today if they'd let me be one of those czars."

The line-up against Proposition No. 6 is interesting because of the diverse elements represented. Old Doc Townsend's organization says it is a "nefarious proposal"—a thinly-veiled attempt to "link up the senior citizens with the underworld." The California Chamber of Commerce says the five-man commission would be above all law and could punish a man for playing a social game of bridge.

The liquor interests are just as indignant over the scheme. Arthur H. Samish, the "lobbyist king," who represents the liquor people at Sacramento, says it would lead to pay-offs and corruption, and adds:

"Crime would flourish. Public reaction would bring an upsurge of prohibition sentiment."

Called 'Diabolical Scheme'

State Senator Ralph E. Ewing, a Republican of San Bernardino, who conducted an investigation of the proposal, calls Proposition 6 "a brazen and diabolical scheme"—"a bold attempt of five men to legalize and obtain absolute control of gambling in all its nefarious phases. . . ."

The State itself, as is its custom, has issued a pamphlet in which the voter may read the arguments put forth by both sides.

Here is the argument in favor of Proposition No. 6 as prepared by Roy G. Owens, vice president, Pension and Taxpayers Union, Inc.; Glen S. Wilson, former Townsend Plan national field representative, and Attorney Aaron Sapiro:

"Vote 'Yes.' Here is your opportunity to reduce your taxes at least 25 percent, and make business better. This amendment will raise all the money needed to pay the entire cost of old age and blind pensions, by taxing gambling. The tax revenue thus derived will remove the entire present burden thereof from the back of every taxpayer. . . .

Expect $300 Million Revenue

"Homeowners and legitimate businessmen are taxed to the limit, but bookmakers and gamblers are 'above the law' and operate without paying taxes.

"Propostion No. 6 compels bookmakers and gamblers to pay taxes like everybody else. It places all gambling under strict state regulation. It is estimated that at least $300,000,000 of gambling tax money will flow into the State treasury to pay old age and blind pension costs.

"This measure cuts the present thousands of bookmakers and gambling parlors to a maximum of 480 licensed operators in the entire State. It will end 'grandstand' police raids which get newspaper headlines by jailing decent citizens who occasionally play poker at home or bingo at church socials, American Legion halls or Elks clubs. It will permit slot machines only in locations not frequented by juveniles.

"It is a fact that every law ever designed to end gambling has broken down—failed. . . .

Called a 'Good Law'

"Proposition No. 6 is a good law with teeth in it. . . . The commission charged with administering this law is responsible to the people. . . . This provision of the amendment has brought on the enmity of powerful interests who do not want a commission elected by the people. They prefer a 'politically appointed' commission which they could take over.

"It is as though on a stage before you stand two groups asking for your vote. On one side . . . stand the thug, the gambler, the racketeer and the payoff politician. They ask you to vote 'No.'

"On the other side of the stage asking you to vote "Yes," stand the old folks, the pension groups, the overburdened taxpayers of California and all decent-minded citizens who want to stop corrupt payoffs and who desire better law enforcement and good government.

"All you have to do is vote with your friends."

And here is the argument against Proposition No. 6, as prepared by Francis V. Keesling, sr., chairman, Californians Against the Gambling Combine; Mrs. Edward T. Walker, president, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. Chalmers McGaughey, chairman, Southern California Citizens Committee:

'Would Encourage Crime'

"For California's welfare, for the security of your home, your children, your schools and your government, vote 'No.'

"At a time when the entire country is aroused over the growing power of nation-wide crime syndicates, when the prevalence of racketeering has become a national scandal, California is asked, by glib promoters, to adopt a constitutional amendment that would encourage big-time crime, civic corruption and juvenile delinquency and make law enforcement tremendously more difficult."

The statement says the amendment would in no way improve the status of pensioners, and continues:

"Actually, Proposition No. 6 is a sordid scheme to license every known form of gambling, and create a vastly profitable gambling empire under the absolute control of five promoters who brazenly name themselves — in the act — as gambling commissioners! The commission is not subject to control by either the governor or the legislature. . . .

"The five-man gambling commission could set up race tracks for dogs or horses . . . to operate 365 days of the year. It would have the power to dictate to every gambling licensee the exact type of gambling machine he must use in his establishment. . .

Powers Called Absolute

"So absolute would be the powers vested in this five-man commission that people playing friendly games of bridge, poker or canasta for small stakes at home would have to secure licenses or face the threat of jail sentences! . . .

"The eyes of the underworld are on California! If Proposition No. 6 is enacted, only disaster can result—big-time gangsterism, rampant crime of every description, civic corruption on an unprecedented scale, and a running, bloody warfare for control of gangland rackets.

"Keep the crime rackets out! Keep California a place where Californians will continue to be proud and happy to live.

"Vote No on 6!"

The proposed amendment was put on the California ballot after the sponsors obtained the 204,672 valid signatures required by law.

Court Clears Mayhew Of Charges by Son

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—Sir John Dixon Mayhew, wealthy 66-year-old industrialist and politician, was cleared today of a divorce court accusation that he was intimate with his son's wife over a period of nearly two years.

John de Parigault Gurney Mayhew, 41-year-old son of Sir John, had named his father as co-respondent in a divorce suit against his wife, France (Peggy) Mayhew. Justice Charlton Hodson found the son was "quite unable to tell the truth," and described the wife as a "tainted witness" whom he could not believe.

Talmadge Backer Fights to Retain Segregation Bars

ATLANTA, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—A Talmadge spokesman said today Negroes will be chased from farms and eventually to Northern cities if segregation bars in schools are pulled down.

Roy Harris, who has twice engineered Herman Talmadge into the governorship, said a "concerted effort" is being made to line up white landowners behind this plan. He didn't say who originated the idea of the possibility of a court-decreed end to segregation.

"The object and purpose is to get all of the farmers to enter into the same agreement so there will be no Negroes in these particular communities to attend the public schools," Harris said.

Harris is battling Negroes who filed suit in Federal District Court to end segregation in Atlanta public schools. Negro sources said Harris is trying to frighten them into dropping the suit.

Woodward's Reports Net Of $849,098

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of Woodward & Lothrop totaled $849,098 in the fiscal year ended July 31, President Andrew Parker reported yesterday. This was equal to $3.02 a common share, after payment of preferred dividends.

Parker

In the previous fiscal year, the Washington department store reported net income of $1,092,271 or $3.99 a common share.

Stockholders at the annual meeting yesterday elected three new directors. They are Nelson T. Hartson, attorney; Lee D. Butler, auto dealer, and Donald Buckingham, vice president of the store in charge of merchandising. Two are additions to the board which was expanded to 11 members from 9.

Brainard W. Parker, father of President Parker, retired as a director after 35 years service with Woodward's. He now lives in Rhode Island and found it difficult to attend monthly board meetings.

All other directors and officers were reelected.

Parker noted in his annual report that total sales of $37,675,533 were 2.9 percent under the previous 12-month total of $38,799,163. General expenses of $35,754,039 compared with $36,718,040 in the previous year.

Commenting on current operations, Parker pointed out that the new Bethesda-Chevy Chase store should be ready for opening on November 1. Development of the Virginia store, he added, has been delayed by litigation over indirect rights to a closed street.

Also company officials are working on plans for construction of a parking garage for customers and plans for a customer tunnel under G st. to connect the Main and North buildings.

Woodward's balance sheet showed a ratio of current assets to current liabilities of 3.50 to 1, as of July 31, 1950. At the close of the previous fiscal year, the ratio was 3.04 to 1. Current assets as of July 30 totaled $12,804,758, against $8,449,093 last year.

Earned surplus rose to $8,232,137 against $8,124,739 while total assets of $25,404,095 compared with $20,941,032 on July 30, 1949.

Parker also noted that book value of the common stock is now $43.42 a share, against $17.06 a share 25 years ago.

He added that operations for the current year should benefit from a modernizing and consolidation of departments at the North Building. "Expenses in our North Building," he said, "were high, thus accounting in part for the not too satisfactory profits from combined operations."

NEW SERVICE: Claude A. Jagger, formerly assistant general manager of the Associated Press, has formed the Hawaiian Economic Service, business and economic consultants of Honolulu. The new firm has purchased the assets of the Hawaiian Economic Foundation, a non-profit association of 70 island corporations and financial institutions, which Jagger headed as president the past three years.

ODD LOTS: Steel output rate this week is estimated at 102.6 percent of capacity, greater than ever before attained . . . B. & O. Railroad has placed orders for 4000 new steel hoppers . . . John McLatchie has been promoted to advertising manager of Time magazine . . . American Can Co. will open a new plant Thursday at Halethorpe, Md., to manufacture paper milk containers at a rate of 250 million annually . . . United States Treasury bonds yesterday moved up as much as 3/32 to continue last week's recovery.

GROWTH: The Suburban National Bank of Silver Spring, Md., today will observe its fortieth anniversary. President Fred L. Lutes said assets now total $29,387,061, against $25,000 the first year. The bank has five offices.

PROGRESS: All American Airways, which has its headquarters in Washington, yesterday reported 62 percent more passenger revenue in the third quarter this year than in the same 1949 period. Passenger revenue amounted to $460,156 in the three months ended September 30 against $283,892 in the like period last year. Air mail and express also showed measurable increases.

EXTRA DIVIDEND: Sears, Roebuck & Co. declared a regularly quarterly dividend of 50 cents and an extra dividend of 75 cents a share on the company's capital stock. Both dividends are payable December 11 to stockholders of record November 10. The extra brings payments this year to $2.75 compared with $2.25 last year.

EARNINGS: Hammermill Paper Co. reported net income of $1,370,081 or $3.50 a share for the first nine months, against $514,774 or $1.10 a share in same 1949 period. Other earnings statements on a per share basis follow:

$25 Unit Price Set on Kaiser Steel Issue

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (AP).—A unit price of $25 was set today on a new 40 million dollar stock issue of the Kaiser Steel Corp. to be offered to the public, subject to approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Also, a rate of $1.46 a year per share was set for the 1,600,000 shares of cumulative preferred stock that will be issued along with 800,000 shares of common.

Each unit, carrying the $25 price, will consist of one share of common stock with a par value of $1 a share. They will be transferable only in such units until October 1, 1951, unless separated sooner by the Kaiser board.

The stock issue is being underwritten by a group of 234 investment houses throughout the United States, headed by the First Boston Corp. It is part of a 125 million dollar financing program which includes issuance of 60 million dollars in 3¾ percent first mortgage bonds and a 25 million dollar bank credit agreement.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (AP).—Most grains ran into a fair amount of profit-taking, a natural development after last week's advance, and slid gently lower today.

The market started out firm enough on accumulated overnight buying orders. There wasn't much activity on this early strength, and once the small demand had been taken care of prices started to slip. Wheat fell first, followed later by soybeans and corn.

Wheat closed 1 to 1½ lower, corn was ¾-⅞ lower, oats were ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, rye was ⅛-¼ lower, soybeans were 2½ to 3 cents lower and lard was 3 to 15 cents a hundred pounds lower.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 35 cents to $1.10 a bale higher today. The basically tight supply situation in cotton continued to stimulate broad trade and commission house buying. Gains extended to $2.60 a bale before the market started to give ground on persistent hedging and profit taking. Traders estimated about 50,000 bales of C. C. C. cotton was hedged in market today. According to some ideas, the C. C. C. has only about 17,000 bales of 1948 cotton stocks still unsold.

American Express Recapitalization Plan Approved

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (AP).—Amerex Holding Corp. and American Express Co. today announced jointly their boards had approved a plan of reorganization.

The plan contemplates recapitalization of American Express and issuance of new shares of $10 par value.

Amerex Holding Corp., which now owns more than 99 percent of the shares of American Express, would receive 2,214,324 new shares of American Express in return for its present holdings in American Express and its remaining assets.

Amerex would distribute the new American Express shares of its shareholders on the basis of three shares of American Express for each share of Amerex and Amerex would be dissolved.

The other holders of American Express shares would receive 11 2/5 shares of new $10 par value stock in exchange for each share of $100 par value now held.

The plan would provide American Express with additional capital for use in its business.

It is subject to approval by the holders of two-thirds of the shares of each company and receipt of a favorable tax ruling from the bureau of internal revenue.

Special meetings of the stockholders of Amerex and American Express have been called for November 20 and 21 to act on the plan.

'The Relapse' Is Anything Else But

By Richard L. Coe

"THE RELAPSE," at the Gayety, is a rare, rich comedy, exuberently played, handsomely staged and a constant pleasure to the ear.

It is in listening to this Restoration comery, which Sir John Vanbrugh further titled "or Virtue in Danger," that the core of enjoyment lies. Its elegance of words is in such contrast to our customary use of them. While it may take you a spell to catch the leisured, literate style of this piece, your patience will be well rewarded. The reason for your initial lassitude will lie in the fact that our language today, especially stage and picture language, is, as that magazine has it, so curt, clear, concise.

But language may be more than this and on the Gayety stage it is—and in happy contrast to the earthbound lines of our previous Broadway tryouts, "Affairs of State," "The Barrier" and "The Curious Savage." Here we have language used with respect for its shades of meaning, its delicacy of inflection and its barbed, hidden meanings.

The story of the play would require quires of paper to tell. Briefly, you see one virtuous man go back to his former lack of it, his wife dally with but ultimately redeem a soldier, her cousin play a gentler Iago, a town fop hoist by his own vanity, a country wench cheerfully accepting whatever man the Fates send her, her rich father relax into city ways and sundry other characters behave either in mischievous manner or mere chicanery.

What you'll most enjoy in this are the characters and there are a whale of a lot of them. Their disarming bounce is far livelier than most of the carbons we're all too used to from the Broadway hit pattern machines.

Chief of the gleeful horde is Cyril Ritchard's Lord Foppington, an outrageous dandy who thinks every woman who sees him in love with him. It is no mean triumph that Ritchard can make this mincing, foolish fellow at once literate, amusing, silly and honest. What a fellow this one is! Surely the season will bring nothing more quietly amusing than his "well, stap me vitals" and "split me windpipe." It is a glittering, brilliant performance.

A Capable Company

Madge Elliott, as a fivolous widow, will live in your memory with her second act curtain line. The lights are shrouded, she's fighting for her virtue and in a cry for protection she whimpers, ever so softly, "Help! Help!"

The rest of the company, which Mr. Ritchard has directed, is I'm pleased to say, considerably better than an American audience has any right to expect, since this sort of style is so seldom allowed our players. I recall, for instance, several professional productions here and in New York of such things as "The School for Scandal" and "The Rivals" which were decidedly inferior to this one, for the most part drawn from the Brattle Theater Company of Cambridge, Mass.

The group is playing with spirit and without that awkwardness costume plays engender.

Not of the Brattle group, Ruth Matteson has nice style for the faithful wife, a reading not unlike what you get from Kay Hammond, whose Mrs. Sullen is a very special thing. Phillipa Bevans, bedecked as a cackling, frumpish maid, has a splendid time looking after her Miss Hoyden, sportingly played by Jan Farrand. Thayer David, evidently a Brattle wheelhorse, is fine as the countryman, Sir Tunbelly Clumsey and there's a delightfully moony bit from Carl Don, as a bumbling servant.

Words of Wit

Robert Fletcher makes a nicely successful younger brother and Jerry Kilty has the part of the matchmaker Coupler, a role he seems intent on not overdoing, though he does get across to you the reason why Sheridan, in his rewrite, turned him about.

If it was Vanbrugh who contributed the literate lines of 254 years ago next November 21, the current production surely owes its verve to Actor-Director Ritchard, who, by the way, learned only yesterday afternoon that lighted candles are verboten on Washington stages. While this played hob with one or two lighting plots, no one noticed.

If you keep your ears tuned, you'll hear some witty things at the Gayety: "Once a woman has given you her heart, you can never get rid of the rest of her body" or "No man worth having is true to his wife."

For it is a cheerful thing to again hear words relished on a Washingon stage, not just blunt sentences which pass for speeches.

THE STAR: Cyril Ritchard, long a star in England and Australia, has just been raised to star billing in this country by the Theater Guild for his work as actor and director of "The Relapse," which opened last night at the Gayety

THE PIX kicks off its operatic movie week today with an odd choice; not because it's "Carmen" is it odd, but because this particular "Carmen," in case the Pix pickers didn't realize it, isn't so much musical as it is voluptuous, ...The screen play accents the Merimee story, using the Bizet score, if I remember correctly, merely as background music... But with Vivienne Romance and Jean Marais in the leads, who will care? ...This will be followed Thursday by "Tosca," with Tagliavini.

THE TEXAS STATE Society tonight takes up most of the Arena stage seats for "The Delectable Judge." . . . Which is E. P. Conkle's comedy about Judge Roy Bean, with Henry Danilowicz, the small fry's favorite tennis pro, as the law west of the Pecos.

HALLOWEEN'S imminence means the annual costume contest for five Sidney Lust theaters, the Bethesda, Hyattsville, Cheverly, Kaywood and Viers Mill . . . All will take place this Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with prizes for the prettiest, funniest and most original.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IF MR. STEVE OWEN of the New York Giants is not doing the finest job coaching in the pro football league, it will at least stack up nicely against anybody else's. Owen may not be offensive minded but when he beholds a good guard or tackle prospect, he gets the same eye-gleam that most other coaches reserve for a passing quarterback or a guy who can carry the ball.

In two games now, Owen's Giants have shattered the offensive game of the Cleveland Browns, who were the scourge of the old AAC. In 20 minutes of football against the Giants, the Browns have scored exactly one touchdown. The Giants were supposed to be out of the race at this point, but on the contrary they are sharing their division lead with the Eagles at four wins and one defeat each.

Povich

Owen's genius always had been defense. He came out of Enid (Okla.), as a lineman who was good enough to make good immediately in pro football with the Giants, and when he took over the coaching job of the Giants, he still operated on the theory that football games are won up front.

It is pretty significant that the Giants are on top in their division despite the fact that they haven't averaged two touchdowns a game, the worst scoring record in the league. The explanation is, of course, that they've allowed only 54 points against them.

ONE DAY IN Cleveland, a few years back, a coach in the pro league was orating about good football players and proceeded to name what he believed would be the greatest All-Star team of all time. "Give me Grange and Thorpe in the Backfield, Baugh to pass, and I'll take Cliff Battles as my fourth man," he said. And then he proceeded to name his favorite ends, his tackles, and his center.

"But you haven't named any guards," he was reminded.

"That's right," he admitted, "I haven't named any guards. But whoinell knows anything about guards except Steve Owen?"

The Redskins have scored 43 points more than the Giants this season, yet have lost four of their five games. San Francisco has averaged nearly 20 points per game, but has blown five out of six. The Giants beat the Browns earlier in the season, 6-0, because they were the only team in the league who could sit on a 6-point league.

THE REDSKINS gave out with a nice effort against the Cardinals in the second half the other day, but their performance still left much to be desired. Bill Dudley's fumble of a punt, and Sammy Baugh's pitch-out that was intercepted, both for touchdowns, were breaks of the game, but otherwise the Redskins were bereft of their usual alibi—blaming a defeat on Howie Livingston.

When they released Livingston last week to make room on their roster for Charlie Justice, the Redskins left themselves out on a limb. It was getting a bit boresome, week after week, to hear their complaints they had lost because Livingston had muffed a pass-defense assignment here or there. Their pass defense, without Livingston, wasn't very good in that first half.

The Redskins' defenders were lacking in both speed and savvy on the 64-yard pass play from Tripucka to Bob Shaw, and the next one from Tripucka to Frank Polsfoot for 81 yards. The Cardinals showed the crowd a pair of ends who could outrun Stout and Dowda, Redskin backs, after hoodwinking them in the first place.

BUT THERE was balm for the Redskins otherwise. Sunday was the day when Harry Gilmer came of age as a big league quarterback, and if ancient Sammy Baugh ever gets back into the No. 1 spot as other than a spot passer, it will be surprising. Gilmer simply is getting too good, but with his passing and his direction of the club, and with his runs when he is trapped he is the Redskins' No. 1 thrill-producer.

Gilmer may never attain Baugh's excellence as a passer, but who ever did? Baugh has been trying to yield the job to Gilmer for three seasons now, so he isn't being exactly crowded out. Baugh would like to get back to his Texas ranch, if the Redskins would let him, and they are now in that favorable position with Gilmer taking over.

From here in, the Redskins ought to be a more interesting team even if their title chances are nil. Charlie Justice gave it a good whirl Sunday, even though he wasn't ready. Choo-Choo didn't quite go all the way, but he opens up a lot of possibilities for the Redskins. Redskins fans haven't seen him run yet. Some day when they aren't 24 points behind in the second half, they'll take the wraps off Justice as a ball-carrier, and then it will be fun.

Asks Cards to Pay Bills of Injured Len Ford

Browns' Boss Threatens to Quit NFL

CLEVELAND, Oct. 23 (AP).—National Football League officials offered "no comment" today in answer to a Cleveland Browns move to have the Chicago Cardinals pay the remaining salary and medical bills of an injured Cleveland player.

Arthur (Mickey) McBride, owner of the Browns, said he would ask Commissioner Bert Bell to order the Cards to reimburse the Cleveland Club as the result of serious injuries incurred last week by End Len Ford of Washington, D. C.

At the same time he threatened to sell his team's franchise and quit the league if "slugging and fighting" in NFL league games continues.

Bell said in Philadelphia he would wait until he received the complaint before saying anything.

"After all, I don't know what it's all about," Bell said. "I have to have both sides presented in order to make any decision."

Cardinal President Ray Benningsen was reported from Chicago to be unexcited about McBride's statement, but he declined comment until he hears from Bell.

Ford suffered a broken nose, fractured cheek bone and jaw, and lost several teeth in the game with the Cardinals.

"Ford was deliberately slugged by Pat Harder of the Cardinals," McBride said. "Motion pictures of the game show our boy was blameless.

"Football is a rough game, and we wouldn't object if a boy were hurt on a legitimate play. But this was different. It not only injured one of our outstanding players, but it jeopardized our changes in the league.

"The fault was purely that of the Cardinals, and we're going to send the bill to Commissioner Bell with a request that he have the Cardinals pay it."

Ford Was Put Out of Game, Fined By Bell After He Suffered Injuries

Poor Len Ford always has been the wronged man. When he was racked up in that New York Giants' game, Referee Sam Giangreco accused Ford of holding and penalized Cleveland 15 yards.

He was put out of the game and fined $50. Next day, when Commissioner Bert Bell learned that Ford had to undergo surgery, he rescinded the fine. At that time, Bell said he would investigate by studying the movies of the game.

"I'm highly in favor of teams which cause injuries to other players paying all hospital costs."

Owen did not infer that the Browns were at fault as Quarterback Travis Tidwell and Tackle Arnie Weinmeister of the Giants suffered a twisted ankle and injured knee, respectively, in yesterday's game. Both were carried off the field on a stretcher and probably will miss next week's game with the Cardinals.

The Browns carry insurance on players injured in games, but the policy does not cover salaries paid to incapacitated personnel.

Bennigsen said Harder's record speaks for itself, and that the Cardinal player had never been thrown out of a pro game.

"There is too much slugging and fighting going on, and the officials don't seem to do much about it. If they don't want to play football, let's fold the thing up. If they want to make football a fight, we can play that way, too. But we won't do it—we'll just quit the game," McBride said.

"I don't want to have anything to do with this fighting, and if it continues I'll sell the Cleveland franchise and get out. We expect to lose some games, but we want a fair shake from the officials and the other teams. If we don't get it, we'll fold up."

Going Gets Really Rough For Redskins

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

As Gabriel Heatter would put it, "Ah, but there's bad news for the Redskins."

Shackled to the chains of a four-game losing streak and headed toward their worst season since they've been in Washington, Coach Herman Ball's pros were asking themselves yesterday, "where do we go from here?"

After that, the going gets even tougher for a Redskins' team which has beaten only the winless Baltimore Colts in five league games. After the Eagles come the New York Giants, two-time conquerors of the Cleveland Browns; then a return match here with the Eagles and then out to Cleveland to tackle the Browns.

If there's still anything left of the team, they'll reassemble for a November 26 engagement with the Colts, which appears to be their only hope for another NFL victory.

The worst record any Redskins' team has made since the franchise was moved to Washington from Boston in 1937 was the 4-8 mark of Turk Edwards' 1948 team.

Wha Happen?

What's happened to the team that swept its five-game preseason schedule to become cochampions of football's Grapefruit League?

Never, during the exhibition season, did Ball & Co. think they had a world-beating team but they did think they had assembled a club which would give the stronger teams a good riffle and even win its share of games.

Somewhere between here and Kansas City where they polished off the Yanks in their final preseason game, the Redskins have lost something. It isn't a desire to win, because the players definitely have that.

But the Redskins don't have it—that little intangible something which separates the good teams from the also rans.

Sunday's 38-28 loss to the Chicago Cardinals was a good demonstration that the Redskins are missing that little "it." They were going along good, trailing only by 10-7 in the second period, when the bottom fell out. Sammy Baugh's intended pitchout to Bill Dudley was intercepted by End Tom Wham, and the result was touchdown, Cardinals.

Two plays later, Dudley, who hasn't been the Dudley he's capable of being for the last two games, dropped a punt on the Redskins' five-yard line and three plays later it was another Cardinals' touchdown and the Redskins' goose was cooked.

"It wouldn't be so bad if rookies had made those mistakes," one of the coaches was saying yesterday, "but when veterans like Baugh and Dudley do it, it's just unexplainable and inexcuseable."

The coaches are high on Charlie Justice and are sure he'll be of tremendous help as soon as he gets squared away, which should be this week.

But the addition of Justice to a Redskins' team at this stage of the season is like adding Ted Williams to the St. Louis Browns in the last three weeks of the baseball season.

He'll help at the gate, but too many games have already been lost for him to help in the standing.

Appling Offered Memphis Job

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (AP).—Luke Appling may become manager of the Chicago White Sox farm club at Memphis in the Southern Association this week.

"Appling has had other offers to manage minor league clubs," said club official Chuck Comiskey, "but I'm inclined to think he will regard our proposition as the best."

Tatum Nominates State's Feathers

Coach Jim Tatum yesterday watched moving pictures of Saturday's North Carolina State-Maryland football game and then said:

Feathers' N. C. State team upset Tatum's Maryland club, 16-13.

"It was excellent coaching. Their line play was magnificent," Tatum said.

Who Says Harvard Isn't Deep? Classy Band Numbers 140 Men

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

SAY WHAT YOU will about the Harvard football team, you can't beat the band.

The 140-piece organization is as fine a musical group as any school has tooting for it. And the Harvard boys not only toot—they root, no matter what the score against their football team.

Clever halftime shows are an institution at Cambridge and, in these losing days, Harvard Stadium fans are reluctant to have the game continue after intermission. "Let them play, let them play," is the usual shout.

Millions of television viewers had a chance last Saturday to see the famed Harvard band in action. They couldn't have been disappointed.

With formidable Army the opponent, the theme of the show was an appropriate burlesque of two, three and four-platoon football.

With half the band on the field, an impressive 70 men, the other half stood on the sidelines. The P. A. announcer presented the Harvard band with "substitutions unlimited."

While the crowd howled, six or seven bandsmen kept rushing in to replace an equal number. Tuba players jogged up and down the sidelines, waiting for their call to duty.

Specialists weren't ignored, either. The announcer explained, "We have a half-dozen men who are able to play only one note. But, at that note, they're the best in the country."

The Glockenspiel artist, the one with the clarinet, trombone, etc., then took turns playing that note. The full band behind them would pick up the beat and swing into "Ten Thousand Men of Harvard." It was all slightly hilarious.

At Harvard, where they carry amateurism to an extreme, even the band isn't school-supported. The members buy their own coats and even pay dues for the privilege of playing.

Once you've been a member, you are always welcome to come back and play. Thus the size of the band fluctuates from week to week and all the players aren't fuzzy-cheeked.

There are a million stories about the band, almost as many traditions.

One of the best of the latter is that the Harvard band never goes through New Haven without paying its respects to Yale. And that's regardless of the hour—the earlier in the morning, the better the Harvards like it.

They get out of their busses, line up and serenade the Elis with Harvard songs. Sleepy and enraged Yale men rush to the windows and douse the bandsmen with water, slippers and anything else handy.

Golfers Pay Respects

Worsham Funeral Services Will Be Held Here Tomorrow

Area golfers and golf officials will pay final respects to the memory of youthful Marvin (Bubby) Worsham tomorrow afternoon.

Funeral services for the youngest member of the famous Washington golfing family, killed Sunday at Wake Forest, N. C., in an automobile accident, will be conducted at Pumphrey's Funeral Home, 7557 Wisconsin Ave., Bethesda, at 1:30 p. m.

Interment will be at Columbia Gardens Cemetery, 3411 Lee blvd., Arlington.

Lew Worsham, golf pro at Oakmont (Pa.) Country Club, 1947 National Open Champion, said that Wake Forest golf coach John Johnson and members of the golf team will be invited to serve as pallbearers.

District Golf Association President Frank McArdle said that a resolution of sympathy has been sent to young Worsham's family and that officers of the association will attend in a body. District Junior Golf Director Frank Emmet and most of young Worsham's former junior golfing companions will also attend.

Worsham was twice winner of The Washington Post's Schoolboy golf tournament, in 1946 and 1947. He was captain of the Wake Forest golf team his freshman year and in 1949 qualified for the National Amateur where he reached the second round.

Wake Forest Holds Service for Worsham

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Memorial services were conducted here today for Bubby Worsham and Eugene Scheer, two Wake Forest College athletes killed in an automobile accident early yesterday morning.

Had Middies Raging at USC

Navy's Ed Erdelatz Coach of the Week

WHEN THE FINAL gun's blast showed Navy a 27-14 winner over Southern California at Baltimore last Saturday, it bespoke the name of The Washington Post's Coach of the Week—Navy Coach Eddie Erdelatz.

Ed Erdelatz

The wonders worked by Erdelatz in transforming a Navy team that had not won a game into a raging force against the Trojans were both startling and numerous. He set the example himself, in ridding the Middies of their defeatism, by telling them all week that "here's one you can win."

But it was primarily a test for Erdelatz and his staff, who boldly discarded their previous defense patterns of the season and introduced a new six-man line, and a 6-1-4 formation against passes to combat the variety of Southern Cal offensive tactics.

Hitherto, Erdelatz had been working with the defenses he brought along from the San Francisco Forty-Niners. "But I learned that the college boys were not up to playing the pros' defenses," he said a week before the game. "I'm trying to fit my new assignments to my personnel."

Even after Southern Cal had cut Navy's lead to 20-14 in the fourth quarter, Erdelatz was not content to try to sit on a 6-point lead, and permitted Bob Zastrow to throw the ball. It paid off when passes took Navy deep into Trojan territory and set up Zastrow's final touchdown gallop on an 18-yard "keep" play.

And Erdelatz was working with neither of his first-string ends, Tom Bakke and Bob McDonald, available for the game. He was unable to substitute by units, but he managed to keep fresh men in the lineup against each Trojan charge.

Incidentally, the Navy players beat The Washington Post to the notion that Erdelatz was the Coach of the Week. At the game's end, players of the Middies rushed away from the brigade that tried to carry them off the field and made for Erdelatz, toting him off the field on their own shoulders.

Rickey Status Due Today

BROOKLYN, Oct. 23 (AP).—Branch Rickey met with other Brooklyn Dodger stockholders today without announcing his plans for 1951.

Rickey and his partners wouldn't say whether his contract as Dodger General Manager, expiring Saturday, will be renewed.

"I am available," said Rickey. "I have not received any offers from another club. I am not going to discuss any other club or any other engagements."

Walter O'Malley, Dodger vice president and owner of 25 per cent of the club, said he will make an announcement at 3 p. m. (EST) tomorrow that "might throw some light on the situation."

"My stock is sold to somebody," Rickey said, "whether it's William Zeckendorf or my remaining partners."

Zeckendorf arranged to buy Rickey's 25 per cent holdings for a reported 1 millon dollars September 23. But O'Malley and Mrs. Smith have an option giving them first rights to buy the stock for the same price. So far they have not said what they are going to do.

Keene Kayoes Red Arrow In 2d Round

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Chief Red Arrow, Cherokee Indian from Oklahoma City, got a rough reception from District Lightheavyweight Champ Julian Keene last night at Turner's Arena before 724 fight fans.

Keene cut the Oklahoma boy to pieces in the first round of their scheduled 10-rounder downed the Chief for a nine count, and then opened a big cut over his right eye in the second. Officials stopped the fight after 2 minutes and 32 seconds of the round.

It was Keene's thirteenth kayo as a lightheavy. The only bout the local boy dropped in his class was to Red Arrow in a previous bout a year ago.

In the preliminaries, Heavyweight Kid Crockett decisioned Ben Harrison; Lightweight Jimmy Briscoe decisioned Joe Davis; Middleweight Clarence Hinnant kayoed Jimmy Gibbs in 1 minute and 51 seconds of the second round of their five-rounder and Fernando Aquilar decisioned Baltimore Lightweight Kenny Leach.

In the semifinal, local Middleweight Eddie Marshall knocked out the District's Garland Edwards after 54 seconds of the second round. It was Marshall's sixth win out of seven pro fights. All of his victories have been by knockouts. Marshall floored Edwards for a nine count in the first round.

Maryland Crashes to 28th Place

By Harold Claassen

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (AP).—Southern Methodist's unbeaten Mustangs galloped to the top of the standing today in the Associated Press weekly poll as the No. 1 college football team of the Nation.

The Southwestern Conference power, which made stubborn Rice its 42 to 21 victim Saturday night, gained 96 first place nominations from the 246 voting sports critics.

Army, leader the past two weeks, dropped to second despite its 49-0 conquest of Harvard while Oklahoma, the former runner up, slipped to third, the place formerly held by Southern Methodist.

The University of Maryland, rated eighth a week ago, took the biggest fall of any of the colleges, crashing all the way down to 28th place after being upset by North Carolina State, 16-13, for their second loss of the season.

Kentucky remained in fourth place and the top 10 was completed by California, Ohio State, Texas, Tennessee, Northwestern and Cornell in that order.

Tennessee, Northwestern and Cornell are newcomers to the present list, replacing Stanford, Maryland and Washington, all of whom were defeated last Saturday.

With Kyle Rote as their big producer, the Mustangs have romped over five opponents from five different circuits. In order, they have defeated Georgia Tech, Ohio State, Missouri, Oklahoma A&M, and Rice. In building their unblemished record, the Texans have scored 184 points to 61 for their opponents. That's an average of 37 to 12 in each game.

$4.20 Shot Just Lasts by By ½ Length

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

LAUREL, Oct. 23.—Fleet Argo, owned by Dion K. Kerr, jr., and ridden by Jockey Arnold Kirkland, both Virginians, turned in a smashing effort to win the Congressional Purse, featuring a rainy-day program here.

Coming from off the pace, the son of Happy Argo and Hunting Party, both popular in Maryland during their racing days, got home a half length in front of a charging Lotus Blossom owned by Mrs. S. M. Pistorio. Third money in the field of a half dozen 3-year olds went to Ensa in the colors of S. W. Labrot, jr.

Fleet Argo in winning for the fourth time in 17 tries this year operated as a favorite and paid a $4.20 win mutuel to his backers in a crowd of 8154. The track was as sloppy as the mixed ingredients for mud pies and Fleet Argo ran through the goo in 1:13 3/5 for the six furlongs.

Ensa went to the front when Starter Eddie Blind sent them away. However, Fleet Argo, being steadied, was close up followed by Mistambo, Blazing, Lotus Blossom and Mere Bones.

It was not until the stretch that Kirkland asked Fleet Argo for real speed. The bay gelding responded by taking Ensa into camp and Kirkland elected to keep the sophomore going.

This proved a heady move because Lotus Blossom, last entering the straightaway, rallied boldly, weaved between horses and closed fastest of all. She got up in time to nose out the tiring Ensa of second money.

Apprentice Augustino Catalano kept his string of at least a winner a day intact, but it took an "assist" from the stewards to bring his total to 11.

He rode Mrs. Jimmy McGee's Sketch into second position, but the $5.80 favorite was placed first after E. Lawrence's Thunderjet was disqualified and judged second. Thunderjet, with Eddie Campbell up, nudged Sketch Wide while drifting through the stretch. The stewards lighted the "inquiry" sign, viewed the movies and took action.

GW Runs Into South Carolina, Mr. Wadiak Friday Night

He's Made 6 Yds. a Try In 3 Years of Play

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—South Carolina's Steamboat Steve Wadiak fast is emerging as a Mr. Big of Southern Football on the strength of a stiff right arm.

The jut-jawed runner from Chicago has piled up almost as much running yardage as all four University of South Carolina opponents to date. Judicious use of the old-fashioned stiff-arm has been his No. 1 weapon.

Wadiak moves his chunky 5-feet, 8-inch, 190-pound frame at terrific speed, bringing his compact power down hard on every stiff arm.

His average in three years of varsity play is better than six yards a try.

"The stiff-arm has been a lost art for years," University of North Carolina Assistant Athletic Director Chuck Erickson said here after watching Wadiak roll for 256 yards Thursday against Clemson.

"Wadiak has brought it back and it was a distinct pleasure to watch," Erickson said.

After seeing Steve reel off a 73-yard touchdown run in that game and set up another he later scored by sprinting for 66 yards, North Carolina Coach Carl Snavely compared him with another great gridiron Steve—Van Buren of the professional Philadelphia Eagles.

His two long runs and all other yardage he gained twice gave South Carolina the lead in that game against a previously unscored-on, untied team. Finally, Steve's team had to settle for a 14-14 tie.

He led the Southern Conference last year, topping even All-America Charlie Justice, with 775 yards gained.

In appearance against Duke, Georgia Tech, Furman and Clemson, Steve has stepped out for 524 yards, compared with 641 that all four opponents together ground out.

This Wadiak Is A Kidder, Too

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 23—Just ask Coach Rex Enright about how he feels about a fellow named Steve Wadiak in his South Carolina backfield:

"Steve Wadiak is the greatest back I have ever coached."

As for Wadiak, he has given up needling Enright, whom he ardently admires, with this psuedo-cheer which he tossed around as a freshman after admiring alumni had given the coach a new Cadillac.

TRA Ousts Sportsman's Race Track

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Thoroughbred Racing Association (TRA) said today it has suspended Sportsman's Park, Chicago, "due to questionable actions of officers and employes."

The statement, issued by Spencer Drayton, executive secretary of the TRA, did not elaborate.

The TRA said it has no authority to prevent the track from conducting its racing program. The suspension is from the national racing organization. Sportman's Park is conducting an 18-day fall meeting which ends November 4.

The TRA issued this statement:

"The TRA today announced the suspension of Sportsman's Park race track due to questionable actions of officers and directors of the National Jockey Club, operators of Sporteman's Park.

"The suspension takes effect immediately and continues pending further investigation and a hearing at a later date.

At that time, track owner William H. Johnston said the man in question, Robert (Big Bob) McCullough, 58, was removed from his job with a firm which operated a parking concession at both Sportsman's and the Miami Kennel Club.

McCullough, who in the past had held the job of police chief at both tracks, recently was questioned by the United States Senate Crime Investigating Committee in the slaying of former Chicago Police Lieut. William Drury.

The TRA adopted a code of standards in 1947 covering track employes, the tracks themselves, and provided that as a penalty for noncompliance with any rule the track could be suspended on a majority vote of the entire board

In its Chicago hearing, the Senate (Kefauver) Investigating Committee said it had evidence that Paul (the Waiter) Ricca, paroled Capone gangster, was able to borrow $80,000 from Hugo Bennett of Miami, Fla. Bennett is a $23,000 a year auditor for Johnston at the Sportsman's and Miami tracks.

Tebbetts' Stars Win In Snowstorm, 10-0

PRESQUE ISLE, Me., Oct. 23 (AP).—Playing in a snowstorm, Birdie Tebbetts All-Stars beat the Aroostook All-Stars 10 to 0 in five and one-half innings today.

The exhibition game was called because the snow made balls and bats wet and the base paths slippery.

Boards of Examiners Renewed to Select Workers for Army

The Army today will begin to rebuild its boards of examiners to select persons on a competitive basis to fill many of its temporary jobs.

The department suspended many of the boards after the July 14 civil service order which gave the Defense Department authority to select persons on an emergency basis without regard to regular civil service procedure.

Chairman Harry B. Mitchell sent the Army a letter in which he pointed out that the emergency boards to be by-passed. In addition, he explained that the Army was to give first preference for jobs to persons on civil service eligible registers. The Army agreed to follow Mitchell's instructions, though somewhat reluctantly.

The work of the examining boards is supervised by civil service to make certain that veterans are given preference in the exams and for jobs they qualify for.

The Army incident is the latest in the controversy over whether competitive tests should be held to fill emergency jobs. The commission believes the maximum number of competitive tests should continue to be given even though temporary appointments are given to persons who qualify under them. Some personnel officials argue that the commission should suspend many of its competitive tests and concentrate on jobs standards the agencies should use in filling the temporary jobs.

RETIREMENT: Here are some questions and answers on civil service retirement coverage growing out of the emergency:

Q. I have an emergency appointment. Will retirement deductions be taken from my salary?

A. No; not unless you have civil service status and you are reinstated to a temporary job. Your agency may then put you under the civil service retirement system. Otherwise, you'll be covered by Social Security starting January 1.

Q. I have over five years of service under the civil service retirement system and I have retained my title to a future annuity. If I'm reemployed as a temporary and become eligible for Social Security benefits, can I receive an annuity from civil service? . . . A. Yes; in that case you can draw two Federal annuities.

Q. I have an emergency appointment. Can I pay back the money I had refunded to me, for previous service, to the civil service retirement fund?

A. Redeposit of refunded deductions may be made only by a person having retirement status. Generally, person serving under emergency appointments do not have such status.

Q. If I accept an emergency appointment and later am covered by the civil service retirement system, will the time served as an emergency appointee be counted toward civil service retirement?

A. Yes.

Q. I'm retired under civil service and I'm over 60. If I'm reemployed as a temporary and placed under Social Security, can I later collect both Social Security benefits and my present civil service annuity? . . . A. Yes.

Q. I'm a former employe with permanent status and I've had more than five years of service. How can I acquire a retirement status?

A. If an agency employs you under an emergency appointment in place of reinstatement, you'll be able to acquire a retirement status.

Q. While I previously served in a classified job and had permanent status, I don't have reinstatement eligibility. If I accept an emergency appointment, will I be under civil service retirement?

A. No; since your appointment could not be made in place of reinstatement, you would not have retirement status under an emergency appointment.

Q. I now have a job that's under the retirement system. If I accept an emergency appointment in another agency without a break in service will I retain my retirement status?

A. Yes. As a general rule, those under the retirement system will continue under it even though they are given temporary grade promotions, inter-agency transfers, reallocations, etc.

Milk Import Ban in D.C. Under Fire

Independent Dairies Tell Commissioners They Want Right to Continue Business

Spokesmen for the three independent dairies here yesterday demanded the "right to continue our business," in a sharply-worded letter to the District Commissioners.

The letter was in protest against the Commissioner's decision last week to ban importation of milk not inspected locally. The ban is due to go into effect October 31, unless the District Director of Public Health decides a milk shortage exists.

The letter was signed by attorneys Robert E. Lynch and John F. Hillyard, on behalf of Embassy, Wakefield and High's dairies.

The independents, who recently have been the sole handlers of outside milk, criticized Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, director of public health and his staff for being evasive in interpreting the Commissioners' order.

Authority to Seckinger

The order gives Seckinger complete authority to decide when and if a milk "shortage" exists and thus to reopen the local milk market at any time he sees fit.

Specifically, the independent dairies asked the District heads for information on what yardstick Seckinger will use in determining shortages. The Commissioners may consider the letter at today's board meeting.

Said the attorneys: "We represent citizens and taxpayers and persons engaged in a lawful business. We demand that we be given the right to continue our business, and unless someone can give us information, it is impossible to determine whether we are entitled to a permit under the order of the Commissioners."

Could Not See Seckinger

Lynch and Hillyard complained that Seckinger would not see them yesterday. They did see W. W. Burdette, chief of Health Department inspectors, but said he gave no answers to specific queries about the application and interpretation of the Commissioners' order.

Later Burdette explained he simply did not have many of the answers; that the Health Department was conducting spot checks on milk supply and demand. He promised "sufficient notification" on any policy changes.

Dr. Seckinger avoided reporters' calls last Friday and again yesterday.

Proposed Increase Would Net Utility $3,379,000 in New Income Each Year

The slow-motion Potomac Electric Power Co. rate hearing is expected to come to life today when the staff of the District Public Utilities Commission will reveal its case.

V. A. McElfresh, PUC chief accountant, will take the stand to give his analysis of the power company's needs. According to PUC attorney Lloyd Harrison, something less than the Pepco appeal for an over-all 9.2 percent rate increase will be recommended.

The requested rate schedule would net the firm an additional $3,379,000 in revenue, needed, Pepco argues, to attract new investors and backing for an expansion program.

Before McElfresh takes the stand, Capital Transit Attorney F. Lloyd Awalt will enter objections to a long series of exhibits filed by Pepco.

The exhibits seek to justify Pepco's request for a 39.6 percent increase in the transit company's power bill. It would add $537,000 to CTC's present bill of $889,000 yearly.

The power firm also wants to boost the District government bill for street lighting by 59.8 percent.

Yesterday saw the end of the direct testimony by Pepco officials which began last August 21.

Most of the day saw Daryal Myse, a transit attorney, quizzing Pepco's rate engineer, Herbert F. G. Main, on minute accounting details on how Pepco reached its proposed 59.6 percent rate increase.

The PUC hopes to conclude the hearings this week.

Court Voids Apartment Sale To Zlotnick

Broadmoor Co-Op Contract Held Based On 'Misunderstanding'

S. D. Zlotnick, who sought to prove that he bought two bedrooms when he paid $13,000 for his Broadmoor apartment, learned yesterday from the United States Court of Appeals that he bought nothing.

In a two-to-one decision, the Appeals Court found that because the furrier thought that he was getting two bedrooms while the management was selling him one bedroom, there was an "essential misunderstanding" that prevented any valid contract of sale.

Judge Henry W. Edgerton summarized the case as follows:

In 1948, Broadmoor Cooperative Apartments, Inc., bought the Connecticut ave. apartment house and distributed floor plans and a prospectus of alterations.

Zlotnick had rented apartment 102 for 20 years. It and apartment 100 each had one bedroom originally, but in 1931 the bedroom of 100 was detached and added to 102.

Zlotnick bought 102 and claimed he bought it containing the second bedroom. He said he had not seen the prospectus and did not know a bedroom was to be detached. There was other testimony that he had the prospectus in his hand when he put down his deposit.

In his dissent, Judge E. Barrett Prettyman pointed out that on the floor plan the living room was less than one half the size of a 3-cent stamp, and that Zlotnick clearly told the management he wanted to purchase the apartment "presently occupied" by him.

"To say that his perfectly understandable description, made by him and repeated to him by the corporation, was offset by this microscopic enigma in print is neither just nor realistic in my view," Judge Prettyman wrote.

Los Angeles Rent Suit Dismissed Here

Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court yesterday dismissed a suit brought by a group of Los Angeles tenants challenging the right of city officials and Housing Expediter Tighe Woods to remove rent controls there.

Judge Barse ruled that the suit was defective in three ways:

1. The case was filed prematurely, he said, because Woods has not yet removed controls in accordance with resolution voted by the Los Angeles city council.

2. The tenants' suit challenged the legality of the council meeting at which removal of rent control was voted. Such a question is one for the State courts, Judge Barse ruled.

3. The law says that Woods shall remove rent controls from any community where removal is voted by the governing body.

'Suspicious'

Two Fires At NE Home Investigated

Two "suspicious" fires in a home recently purchased by a Negro family in a white neighborhood were under investigation by the fire marshal's office yesterday.

The fires occurred Sunday night in a nine-room house at 716 Hamline st. ne., recently purchased by Samuel Davis, 48, bricklayer, of 4421 Jay st. ne.

Fire Marshal Raymond C. Roberts announced he had ordered a thorough investigation.

The first blaze, a minor one, was discovered at about 10:30 p. m. by a next-door neighbor, Jacques Brinkley. He found what appeared to be a 2-foot length of clothesline burning on the front porch. He stamped out the fire, he told police, and went into his own house.

About 15 or 20 minutes later, he said, he noticed a glare of fire from the house and called the Fire Department, which had the blaze out by 1 a. m.

Police reported there were some newspapers scattered on the porch and that over the scene hung an odor of kerosene. The second blaze burned the side and front of the house, scorched the inside wallpaper, damaged the front part of the roof and scorched furniture stored in the front room.

There was no official estimate of damage but Davis said the house would require extensive repairs before he could move in. He said the house was insured.

Investigators from the fire marshal's office are trying to locate a youth who reportedly told police he found a piece of gasoline-soaked rope near the scene of the first blaze.

At the time of the fire, the Davis family had not yet moved into the house, although a cousin of Davis, Willie Macon, 30, was living there.

Neighbors said the Davises were the first Negroes to buy a house in the immediate neighborhood. The nearest Negro family before had been on the other side of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks, more than a block away.

The house was sold recently by Police Pvt. Stephen D. Beach to the First National Realty Co. Davis said he bought the house from the realty company.

Slowe School First Graders Return Today

Parents and Corning Confer; New Schedule For Children Ordered

First grade students at Slowe Elementary School will return to classes today, ending the protest strike of their parents against part-time schooling.

The decision to send the children back to school resulted from a three-hour conference between representatives of the Slowe Parent-Teacher Association and school officials.

The school, at 14th and Jackson sts. ne., closed down completely Friday when 244 students stayed home. Yesterday all but the 40 first graders, assigned to part-time schedules, were back.

During the conference School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning met the principal objection of the parents.

He said the part-time students will be placed on a 9 a. m. to 12.30 p. m. shift instead of from 2 to 4.30 p. m. Kindergarten students who only go to school half a day anyway will attend from 1 to 3 p. m.

The parents had complained that the children leaving school at 4.30 p. m. would have to cross streets at a time when traffic hazards were greatest and without the help of patrol boys and police.

Dr. Corning also assured the parents the second floor of the school will be completed by February 1st, ending all part-time classes. Workmen planned to start the alterations yesterday but were deterred by the rain, he said.

Dr. Frank M. Snowden, jr., spokesman for the P-TA, said that while the parents had agreed to send the children back to school, they still were petitioning the school board to reverse its decision ordering part-time classes.

He pointed out that there is sufficient room in the nearby white Noyes School to take care of the overflow of Negro children from Slowe. He urged Dr. Corning to recommend this solution to the board.

Police Studying Poisoned Whisky Death of Md. Man

Police yesterday were pondering the problem of how traces of carbon tetrachloride, a poisonous cleaning fluid, got into whisky consumed by Anderson Wyatt, 47, of 519 69th pl., Seat Pleasant, Md.

Wyatt, a weatherstripper, died Sunday at Georgetown University Hospital, nine days after taking several drinks from a pint of whisky he had purchased in the District and taken to his home.

A representative of the distillery which produces the brand of liquor bought by Wyatt said yesterday his company had been notified by the Food and Drug Administration that carbon tetrachloride had been found in the remains of the whisky in Wyatt's bottle.

A complete autopsy report on the victim is awaiting the result of chemical tests.

Court Rules:

Troth Illegal, Man Needn't Support Child

A musician yesterday won his United States Court of Appeals fight to prove he was not bound to support the child of his second "wife."

The suit was brought in District Court by the "wife," Audrey M. Oliver, of 811 Quincy st. nw., against Merton A. Oliver, of 616 Evarts st. ne. She claimed their child was born on September 1, 1946.

Oliver had been married previously but his former wife sued for divorce on ground of desertion. The divorce was granted April 17, 1946, but was not to become "absolute and take effect" until six months later.

On May 6, 1946, the court found Merton and Audrey Oliver married in Baltimore. Four months later the child was born and six weeks after that, she brought suit for support and maintenance.

Oliver admitted the marriage but denied cohabitation or paternity. At first he consented to an order for custody and maintenance for the child but later moved to vacate the order.

He alleged he had "entered the marriage through fraud and compulsion; that he had a former wife living from whom he was not finally divorced; and that he was not the father of the child."

The court concluded that the couple had not cohabited since the marriage, that the ceremony was void and the child illegitimate. Therefore, the court ruled it was without jurisdiction to award custody or maintenance and made no finding as to paternity.

Judge James M. Proctor said that local laws prevent Mrs. Oliver's bringing the suit. Her marriage was void from the beginning, because Oliver's divorce had not become final, said the judge.

"A strong emotional appeal is made to uphold the Baltimore marriage as a means of supporting the child's legitimacy . . . Only by disregarding the law could that object be attained," he stated.

Bucktoothed Bandit Flees Store With $64

Grocer and Butcher Escape Refrigerator Lockup After Theft

A buck-tooth bandit made a $64 haul last night at the Cataldi Market, 2018 Florida ave. nw., and escaped after forcing two men into the meat refrigerator.

In the store when the bandit entered about 6:40 p. m. were Domenico Cataldi, 36, of 1841 Columbia rd. nw., one of the owners and James Austin, 29, of 2054 N. Brandywine st., Arlington, the butcher.

They said the bandit held one hand in his side pocket as though armed.

He took $10 from Austin and $4 from Cataldi, then herded both men into the meat refrigerator.

After taking about $50 from one cash register the bandit found another register and safe he couldn't open. Cataldi was brought out of the refrigerator but told the neatly dressed thief he "didn't know how to open them." Neither did he know how much money was in them.

A few minutes later, Cataldi and Austin, peeping out, saw a customer waiting. The bandit, on the way out, had told him: "Wait a minute; someone will be right out."

Marine Found With Bullet Hole in Head

Virginia State police identified him as Sergt. David Webb, and said he was stationed at Quantico Marine Base. He was taken to Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg before being transferred to the Quantico base last night. The bullet had not been removed from his head.

Sergeant Webb was found unconscious in the cabin clad only in his underwear at about 8:30 o'clock last night. The cabin is located on U. S. 1. Police said they found a .22 caliber target pistol in the cabin.

Sergeant Webb regained consciousness briefly at the Fredericksburg hospital and denied that he had inflicted the bullet wound. He said he could not identify the man who shot him.

Virginia State police are investigating the case. Marine authorities at Quantico refused to comment and said they could not release information on Webb's home address.

Triplet Surprise Catches Parents Two Names Shy

Around the Evans apartment, at 4600 Blue Plains dr. sw., they were calling them One, Two, Three.

Now they're calling them Manfred, Two, Three. Manfred is the first name selected for the Evans triplets (boys), born in the three-room apartment yesterday at 11:20, 12:06 and 12:26 to Mrs. Rose Evans, who had three boys to start with.

Manfred, Two and Three are now in cardboard grocery box cribs, and weigh a total of 14 pounds, a bit more than four pounds each. Dr. William H. Spicer, who delivered the triplets, said the father didn't get excited. Mrs. Spicer, a registered nurse, helped the Evanses pick the first name. The others will harmonize with it, when chosen, she said.

Five Injured, Two Critically In 3-Car Crash at Marlboro

Five persons were injured—two critically—in a three-car crash shortly before 11:30 a.m. yesterday on Route 301 at the intersection with the Marlboro bypass just south of Marlboro.

Charles W. Hawkins, 43, of Westmount, N. J., fractured ankle and fractured ribs, and his wife, Mrs. Viola Hawkins, 44, head injuries. Both were in "good" condition at Prince Georges General Hospital.

John R. Conklen, 23, an Air Force enlisted man, believed to be from Langley Field, Va., in critical condition at the same hospital with head injuries and a fractured leg.

Pvt. Allen C. Hayes of Langley Field, in critical condition with undetermined injuries at Walter Reed Hospital.

Pvt. Thomas W. Dennis, 18, of Langley Field, in "fair" condition at Walter Reed with a fractured leg and possibly other injuries.

County police said the three cars were driven by Hawkins, Dennis and James W. Lynch, 33, of Jacksonville, N. C. Conklen and Hayes were passengers in Dennis' car. Lynch, who was not hurt, was alone.

Police said Dennis, northbound, pulled out to pass another car and struck Hawkins' southbound car headon. The Hawkins car swung across the road and headed toward a bank. Then Lynch, who was behind Dennis, collided with the Hawkins car.

In the District more than a score of traffic accidents were attributed to wet, slippery streets made more dangerous than usual because of fallen leaves.

Traffic Director George E. Kenelpp warned both motorists and pedestrians of the hazards in fallen leaves. On dry days, he said, the leaves look dry on top, but may be slippery beneath.

In one accident, involving two cars about 2:30 a. m. at Massachusetts and Florida aves. nw., BM/3C Richard F. Hendrickson, 23, stationed at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, suffered a possible fractured leg.

At the Naval Hospital his condition was described as "good." Police said Hendrickson forfeited $20 collateral on a charge of colliding. The other car, they said, was driven by Eugene Proctor, 21, of 4120 7th st. nw.

From Leonardtown, Md., the AP reported yesterday the death of Joseph W. Ford, 52, of St. James, Md., of injuries suffered October 16 when he was struck by an automobile.

Richard Mack, 18, 10112 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., was injured seriously yesterday about 7:57 a. m. when his motor scooter was struck by an automobile at Georgia ave. and Seminary rd., Silver Spring.

The driver of the automobile, Edward Allen Evans, 17, 8927 Brookville rd., Silver Spring, was charged with reckless driving and then turned over to Juvenile Court.

Former GI Indicted on Charge Of Posing as Marine Officer

Frank B. Snaer, 28, 2283 H st. nw., posed as a Marine major to buy a uniform from the S. W. Rice Co., 1423 Pennsylvania ave. nw., in August, according to the indictment.

Snaer told his wife that he was the only survivor of a Marine raider battalion during World War II, police said, and suffered "horrible war experiences."

At the outbreak of the Korean conflict, police said, Snaer told his wife he would be called up soon and hastened to buy the uniform. His brother, William Snaer, 27, is wanted by police on an embezzlement charge.

Melvin L. Robinson, 26, 1009 Lamont st. nw., was indicted for first degree murder in the fatal beating of Frank J. McDermott, 62, 511 21st st., Seat Pleasant, Md. Robinson struck McDermott on the head with a stick as he was leaving a "gill joint" in Wiley ct. nw. on September 21, police said, and rifled his pockets.

James N. Thompson, 21, 494 Clark ct. sw., was indicted for manslaughter in the fatal stabbing of Clarence Toye, 25, 1527 N st. se., during an argument at 14th and A sts. se., on September 15.

Howard threw a beer glass during a fight at Joe's Restaurant, 1540 7th st. nw., on October 1, and missed his target police said, but the glass hit Day on the forehead.

Move to Oust Falls Church City Attorney Is Beaten, 6-2

By a 6 to 2 margin, the Falls Church City Council last night upheld its city attorney, LaRue Van Meter, and rejected a motion to dismiss him.

The ouster move came from Councilman Samuel E. McCrary as more than 50 citizens cheered and booed at a stormy meeting.

McCrary said if Van Meter were not ousted, his presence would "jeopardize" the present system of council-appointed city attorneys after November 7.

On that date, election day, residents will vote on whether to elect the attorney or have him council-appointed.

McCrary said he had "the highest regard for Van Meter and the good work he has done for the city."

But, he added, he was afraid the appointive system would lose "because of personal animosity" toward the city attorney by residents.

McCrary described Van Meter as "a political personality" in an office "which should be devoid of politics."

Councilman James E. Durant also voted for an ouster.

The issue arose after Councilman Lee M. Rhoads asked the council to approve his resolution assuring all city employes they will "not be made the victims of political intrigue," to affect the election.

Earlier, City Manager W. R. Woodbury asked the council to impose a city license tax on the estimated 1500 Falls Church cars. He said the $15,000 raised thereby would be applied toward road improvement. The council set the matter for future consideration.

Maryland Synod

Lutherans Hear Plea For Teachers

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Maryland Synod of Lutheran Churches needs more and better Sunday School teachers, the Rev. Howard F. Reisz said today.

Director of the synod's education and youth work, he spoke at the annual Eastern Conference here. About 100 lay and clerical delegates attended the session.

The Rev. Mr. Reisz also said there should be more students in the Sunday schools of the synod, which includes churches in the Baltimore and Washington areas. He noted enrollments have not kept pace with the baptism rate.

The conference was opened with a communion service conducted by the Rev. Herbert L. Schluderberg, pastor of the host Church of Redeemer, and the Rev. Paul L. Reaser of Washington, president of the synod.

Permission to use the old Cardozo High School as an indoor recreation center for the mid-District area was sought yesterday by the District Recreation Department.

The building, located between 8th, 9th and R sts. and Rhode Island ave. nw., was recently declared surplus by the Board of Education.

The first floor contains a gymnasium, the second floor an auditorium, the basement has shower rooms and several rooms suitable for games and crafts.

Milo Christiansen, superintendent of recreation, asked use of these facilities in a letter to Charles S. Stofberg, chairman of the D. C. space assignment committee. Stofberg had asked all District departments whether they had an interest in the Cardozo building.

The Health Department is also interested in using the building as a health center until a new one can be constructed. Christiansen suggested the building was so designed as to easily accommodate both departments.

Christiansen also pointed out the building is close to the proposed Cardozo playground and would be "good indoor facilities in conjunction with the playground."

D. C. Alley Cat Is Feline Fine; Won Blue Ribbon

It was so late when the judges finally decided which of 247 cats and kittens were to get the blue ribbons that Washington's only winner, Jerry, an alley cat, had virtical midnight slits in the pupils of his eyes.

Jerry, owned by Miss Mildred Earl, 17-year-old Wilson Teachers' College student, of 1216 N. Capitol st., took first honors in the household pet class, the show's only division whose entrants were short on pedigree but long on qualities that make good alley cats. The pedigreed winners were out-of-towners.

His Mistake

Judge Voids Arlington's Pool Bonds

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday voided a special election in which $500,000 in swimming pool bonds were voted because his own order setting up the election was in error.

In a four-page decision Judge McCarthy said the order he signed last July was "not in accord" with an act of the 1950 Virginia General Assembly, which authorized holding of the election.

The proposal to build three public swimming pools—two for white and one for Negroes—was approved by a 35-vote margin at the polls August 1.

In his decision, Judge McCarthy said the Assembly's act authorized a vote on this question alone: "Shall the county acquire, construct, maintain, and operate swimming pools."

But his own court order, the judge continued, called for this question on election ballots: "Shall the county contract a debt, borrow money, and issue bonds" for the swimming pools? The contraction of the debt and the issuance of the bonds are two separate issues which must be voted on separately, he said.

Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green sued to void the election but did not cite the error which McCarthy found to be a fatal one.

After disposing of Green's points against the election, Judge McCarthy's opinion said, the court found the one "serious defect in this election" which "it must of its own motion declare."

If the General Assembly act were to be followed literally, the judge declared, two referenda would be called for—one to authorize construction of the pools, and the second to approve the bonds to pay for them.

Judge McCarthy told reporters his decision on the pool bond election will have "no effect" on two new bond issues—$4,750,000 for schools and $2,617,000 to improve sewage treatment—which voters will decide November 7.

Tuberculosis Costs Cited In New Study

The cost of tuberculosis in lives, suffering and dollars is stressed in the 1949-50 annual report of the National Tuberculosis Association, released yesterday.

Killing more than 40,000 persons a year in the United States, the disease is responsible for more deaths in this country than all other infectious diseases combined, the report emphasized.

Dr. James E. Perkins, managing director of the association, pointed out in the report that the monetary cost of care and services for known tubercular patients and the cost for searching out others who may have the disease runs to more than 350 million dollars a year. Some 250,000 persons are known to have tuberculosis in this country, and another 250,000 are believed to be its victims, unknown to health departments, he said.

The report showed that NTA's 1948 Christmas Seal Sale Drive netted $20,226,794 for support of the association and its affiliates, in contrast to $3000 raised in the first Christmas Seal Drive, in 1907. Heretofore.

Beginning with the 1950 Christmas Seal Sale, which opens on November 20, the NTA will be apportioned six cents of each dollar contributed, with at least one-sixth of this to be devoted exclusively to research, Dr. Perkins said.

Arlington Lists 14 New Cases of Damage to Autos

All 14 of the new cases, involving smashed windows, headlights, and side mirrors, were reported Sunday from the South Fairlington area, Arlington police said.

They estimated total damage to the 14 autos at between $400 and $500. Detectives said the cases, similar to those in Alexandria, occurred "probably Saturday night."

Legion Units Plan Parties For Military

Walter Morgan, commander of the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion, yesterday countered armed forces criticism of Washington's recreational facilities with the Legion's plans for entertaining the war-swollen military population here.

Speaking to a group of civic leaders, government and other officials, Morgan answered criticism that, he said, appeared in a recent Sunday newspaper supplement, with a threefold program.

First, more than 60 Legion posts in the District will hold weekly parties for servicemen at their own facilities or department headquarters, 2437 15th st. nw., beginnig on Saturday, October 28.

A third phase of the program, Morgan said, is the establishment of a canteen in the downtown area to provide a haven for servicemen off-duty. Money to finance the decoration of the canteen is a major problem, Morgan stated. Although contractors have offered to provide free materials, he estimated that $10,000 is needed to complete the job.

The legion officer asked those attending to coordinate their organizational programs in dealing with community problems such as that concerning servicemen.

Morgan pointed out that Washington's military population has grown sizably since the outbreak of Korean hostilities—he estimated the increase at 15,000.

High Officials Attend Rites For Stimson

COLD SPRING HARBOR, N. Y., Oct. 23 (AP).—High American officials stood with heads bowed as the body of Henry L. Stimson was borne today from his home to a waiting hearse.

Only a small group of close friends, including several past and present Government dignitaries, were present for the private funeral services. Mr. Stimson died Friday of a heart attack.

The eulogy to the 83-year-old statesman, who served in the Cabinets of four Presidents, was given by the Rev. Paul Austin Wolfe, pastor of New York City's Brick Presbyterian Church. He said:

"We are met together to give thanks for the life of Henry Lewis Stimson . . . a master of law, an officer of the Army, a servant of his God, a statesman of the world and a soldier of peace."

Prominent persons attending the service included Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall, Deputy Secretary of Defense Robert Lovett, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves and Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

The group followed in cars over the 7-mile route from Mr. Stimson's Long Island home to the Memorial Cemetery at Syosset, N. Y., for burial.

There was a prayer; then a lone Army bugler played taps as the body was lowered into the grave.

SCUDDER, EDWIN A.
Each day something reminds me
Of the joy that once was ours.
A sunset glow—a bird's sweet song
Now green leaves, or your favorite flowers;
There is no day that passes
When Memory fails to say,
"He isn't dead; just sleeping
The time 'til you meet, away."

So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up

Mme. Dendramis Chooses American Way

Ambassadress to Career Girl

By Evelyn Hayes

CINDERELLA IN REVERSE—that is almost the story of Mme. Vassili Dendramis, chic, popular wife of the former Greek Ambassador. Whereas Cinderella was whirled from the realm of a working girl to a life of royal splendor, Mme. Dendramis has steppel out of the glamorous life of Ambassadress and into the working world and whirl of fashion.

When Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis left the Greek Embassy early this year, they decided that they would like to remain in America. In the best American tradition, Mme. Dendramis made up her mind to help solve their personal dollar shortage by going to work. As she describes it with great enthusiasm, she is now "in charge of dresses—both custom and ready-to-wear at Elizabeth Arden's in New York.

Yesterday she arrived in Washington to arrange a fashion show of Miss Arden's Ready-to-Wear collection to be held tomorrow at the Sulgrave Club. "It seems funny to come back to Washington as a career girl," she said.

Slim, chic, vivacious, with a flair for fashion, Mme. Dendramis will surely be as successful an ambassadress for Elizabeth Arden as she was for her native Greece.

Revise Pattern Of Thinking, Sorority Told

Women should adopt new patterns of thinking if they are to assume their responsibilities in the world today, Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel told members of Kappa Delta last night at the sorority's annual Founders' Banquet.

Women tend to be conventional in their thinking, and react as their mothers before them did, and as they believe their husbands expect them to, she said. But in this new and rapidly changing world, when women must work for better understanding with women of other nations to improve world conditions, it is vital that women cast aside their old, outdated pattern of thinking, Mrs. Wedel believes.

Mrs. Wedel wife of the Canon of the Washington Cathedral, is also a member of the World Council of Churches International Committee on the Life and Work of Women.

Kappa Delta alumnae from the Washington area, representing 78 colleges throughout the country and college members of three local chapters, attended the banquet at the Kenwood Country Club. Mrs. Everett H. Johnson, president of the Washington Alumnae Association, acted as toastmistress.

Garden Group Sponsors Good Neighbor Fiesta

Senora Esther Meira de Calvo, executive secretary of the Inter-American Commission of Women, was the speaker at the reception last night at the Pan American Union when the Capital Division of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association paid tribute to their Latin-American neighbors.

Mrs. W. R. Chapline, vice president for the District of the National Farm and Garden Association, presided, and introduced the speaker, in the absence of Mrs. H. A. Dodderidge, president of the Capital Division.

Senora de Calvo spoke in praise of the efforts made by American women in the attainment of better statutes on education, civil and political rights, and social and economic conditions for women. She also stressed the necessity of American solidarity through women.

Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, represented the United States. Ambassadors from the Latin-American countries and several European envoys and their wives were present.

Senorita Birta Molina of Mexico did the Mexican hat dance, and marimba music was played by the United States Air Forces Band.

Club Group Plans to Register Nation's 'Unemployed' Womanpower

By Norma Lanum

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Plans to register housewives and other unemployed women for civil defense work were drawn today at a meeting of leaders of nine national women's clubs at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel here.

The registration project was launched at the first meeting of the "women's clearing house," which is composed of delegates from the largest national women's organizations.

The list of available womanpower, when completed, will be turned over to W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, for his use in defense programs.

In this register of womanpower, the club leaders hope to find women with special technical skills and natural talent as organizers. The Government doesn't know where to find these women, the club leaders reasoned, because most of them are "unemployed." But in the event of an emergency these women would prove invaluable.

The club leaders decided also to conduct Nation-wide campaigns to discourage apathy among the women of America to civil defense measures now that the United Nations victory in Korea appears imminent.

"We must alert them but not alarm them," one member said, "so they will be ready in case of disaster."

Also the "clearing house," agreed to channel all civil defense information and instructions from Government agencies to the clubwomen in small communities.

The "clearing house" is anxious to undertake additional programs in defense planning as well. They will meet with Mr. Symington in Washington October 31 to discuss the possibility of new assignments. A special committee within the "clearing house" was appointed today to determine projects they would be best equipped to undertake, so they may suggest these to the NSRB chairman.

HEADING this special committee is Mrs. Ambrose Diehl of San Francisco, Calif., chairman of the department of defense and economic security of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

All leading national women's organizations are invited to join in these defense programs. The organizations represented at today's meeting are the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Federation of Business and Professional Women, the American Association of University Women, the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, the National Council of Church Women, the National Association of Negro Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, Pilot International, and the Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

U. S., U. N. Made Great Gains In Korea, Editor Tells NCJW

EVENTS in Korea have brought the United States one of its most notable military victories; have demonstrated the unity and ability of the United Nations to resist aggression, have settled the free world's lingering doubts of the will and capacity of the United States, and have sounded an alarum bell for the free world.

These were the great gains out of Korea, J. R. Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post told the National Council of Jewish Women last night. That these achievements have been calmly accepted by the American people, Wiggins said, is because Korea is recognized by this country as only a phase in the long effort of Soviet containment that still lies ahead.

Difficulties of a protracted crisis to a democracy, Wiggins conceded, are enormous. In spite of the aggressor's advantages, however, he expressed confidence in the power of a united free world to curb Soviet aggression.

The address climaxed the second day of the NCJW's Mid-Atlantic Regional Conference being held at the Wardman Park Hotel. Earlier in the day the more than 100 delegates to the conference heard James Rotto, sales and publicity director of the Hecht Co., describe the importance of public relations in a service organization. Mr. Rotto told the audience that to do the utmost good an organization must "dramatize itself and sell itself" by making its aims known and understood in the community.

Today's NCJW events include a talk by Robert Nathan, consulting economist and economic adviser to Israel on "The Progress of Education in Israel," and the showing of the film, "Life With Grandpa," about the science of geriatrics. In the evening delegates will hear Bill Downes, CBS newscaster, speak on "The United Nations After Five Years," at a banquet at Woodmont Country Club.

Gilbert Grosvenors Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

By Marie McNair

DR. AND MRS. GILBERT GROSVENOR, celebrating 50 golden years of marriage yesterday, were feted at a reception last night at Wild Acres, their home in Bethesda. Hosts were the Grosvenors' six children—Melville Bell Grosvenor, Dr. Mabel Harlakenden Grosvenor, Mrs. Walter Kendall Myers, all of Washington; Mrs. Samuel Alexander Gayley of Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Mrs. Grosvenor Coville of New York and Mrs. Torfinn Oftedal here from Paris.

The gathering of the clan began at a family luncheon yesterday at the Chevy Chase Club, with Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor, their children, and several of their 14 grandchildren in the group.

Last night the family gathered again just before the reception began, and gifts, which had been pouring in all day, were opened. Mrs. Grosvenor's biggest surprise—something she had long wished for—came from her husband—a ruby ring surrounded with diamonds. Another surprise was the gold coffee service, the gift of her children, and a matching tray from her grandchildren.

At 8:30 when the first guests arrived, Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor were in the drawing room to welcome them, Mrs. Grosvenor in a pinky-mauve gown trimmed in gold and wearing her ruby ring!

Helping to bring back that wedding day in London 50 years ago was Mrs. Julian Ripley, here from New York, cousin of Mrs. Grosvenor, who was her bridesmaid. Reminder of another wedding day was the gold vase on the buffet table, a golden wedding anniversary gift to Mrs. Grosvenor's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner G. Hubbard, from their children; and a tray of same design from their grandchildren.

At one end of the buffet table there was a giant wedding cake inscribed in gold with dates and initials, and at the other an ice cream bell of gold tint tied with satin ribbon.

Gilbert Grosvenor and Elsie May Bell first met in the summer of 1897 at the summer home of Miss Bell's father, Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone. Elsie Bell was a debutante that year and the following year she spent abroad, visiting Japan. In June, 1900, she sailed for Europe to attend the Paris Exposition and to select her trousseau. Young Gilbert Grosvenor meantime had graduated cum laude from Amherst College and was teaching at Englewood Academy in New Jersey. He came to Washington in 1899 to accept editorship of the National Geographic Magazine and observed his 50 years in that post last year.

Following their wedding in London, October 23, 1900, the Grosvenors came to Washington, which has served as home base for a half century of world travel. Sharing the same geographic curiosity, they ranged the globe on foot, on muleback, by car, sea, and air. Mrs. Grosvenor, however, found time to rear one son and five daughters, espouse the cause of woman suffrage and participate in community affairs. Dr. Grosvenor led the National Geographic Society to its position as the largest scientific and educational institution of its kind in the world. He has been president of the society since 1920.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW:

WHEN NORMAN ARMOUR retired two years ago as Assistant Secretary of State, after giving 33 years to foreign service, he had hoped to lead a quiet life at his country home in Gladstone, N. J.

Recently, however, he was asked to be Ambassador to Venezuela, and like the traditional fire horse, he's back in harness again.

In Washington for a week or so before leaving for Caracas, Mr. and Mrs. Armour were honor guests at a cocktail party given by the Charge d'Affaires of Venezuela and Senora de Otanez, who entertained in the absence of the Ambassador and Senora de Pocaterra.

The Otanez' house, just a stone's throw from the modernistic Venezuelan Embassy on Massachusetts ave., is the former residence of Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, now Mrs. Edmund Wilson of New York. Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin was among those reminiscing yesterday on the days of Mrs. Patterson's famous hospitality.

There were many old friends of the Armours who came to bid them farewell, among them Spanish Ambassador-at-large, Felix Lequerica, who gave the Ambassador a warm Latin embrace.

Assistant Secretary of State Edward Miller came early, and was soon on his way. Brig. Gen. Robert Landry, Air Force aide to President Truman, big and ruddy cheeked, was accompanied by Mrs. Landry, and I saw Chief of Protocol and Mrs. John F. Simmons in the center of a group. Mrs. Simmons with a gold rope necklace wound about the high neck of her black frock. Black still leads in the fashion field, judging by yesterday's fete. Nothing could have been smarter than Mrs. Armour's jacket frock of black faille brightened with a pair of magnificent diamond flower-shaped pins on the lapel. In lieu of a hat, she wore a veil held at the sides with miniature velvet bows. And Senora de Otanez' wine red velvet gown with plunging neckline and diamond circlet, was perfect for her deep brown coloring.

DR. B. V. Kaskar, Deputy Foreign Minister of India, who is second only to Prime Minister Nehru, is in Washington for a few days on his tour of visiting Indian Missions. He was entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon by Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, and sister of the Prime Minister.

Among the guests asked yesterday were the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong, Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James Webb, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George McGhee, Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former United States Ambassador to Moscow, now head of Central Intelligence, and Mrs. Smith; Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton, Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, Justice Felix Frankfurter, and Mrs. Frankfurter, and Sir Herbert Broadly of FAO, and Lady Broadly, Admiral and Mrs. Leslie C. Stevens and Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp.

PARTY PARADE:

THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR, Sir Oliver Franks, was a guest at the dinner last evening given by Air Marshal Lord Arthur Tedder, chairman, British Joint Services Mission, who entertained at a stag dinner in honor of Britain's visiting military chiefs.

Also at the dinner were Gen. Sir Neil Ritchie, chief, British Military Staff of the Joint Services Mission; Admiral Sir Cyril Eustace Douglas-Pennant, chief of the British Naval Staff, and Air Chief Marshal Sir George Pirie, head of the Air Staff.

THE TURKISH AMBASSADOR and Mme. Erkin entertained at dinner last evening at the embassy in honor of Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson. Other guests were the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Thomas Finletter, Chief of Protocol and Mrs. John F. Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. James K. Vardaman, Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Col. E. B. Whisner, Mr. and Mrs. Curt Schiffeler, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Vera Petschek, Marvin Braverman, the First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy and Mme. Talat Benler, and Carl Schiffeler.

The Ambassador and Mme. Erkin will go to New York on Friday to attend a reception to be given by the American-Turkish Society of New York on that day at the Waldorf-Astoria to celebrate the twenty-seventh anniversary of the Proclamation of the Turkish Republic which falls on October 29. The Ambassador will address the gathering. They will return to Washington to give a reception on Sunday in celebration of Turkish Independence, when their guests will be members of the Turkish colony residing in and near Washington.

MR. AND MRS. DURWARD V. SANDIFER gave a farewell dinner last evening for Willard Barber, newly appointed Counselor of the United States Embassy in Peru, and Mrs. Barber. Mr. Barber until now has been serving as Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Latin American Affairs.

In the company also were Philip Jessup, United States Ambassador-at-large, and Mrs. Jessup; the Commercial Counselor of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Real, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Marcy and Mr. and Mrs. John Halderman.

Now residing in Philadelphia are Mr. and Mrs. Morton Feldman who were married September 10. Mrs. Feldman is the former Miss Ann Lois Sobel, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. H. R. Sobel

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 14, Has Many Problems, Chief of Which Is Her Jealous Adoration of Another Girl Who Is Nominally Her "Best Friend," But Disloyal

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 14 with a big problem about my best girl friend Eve, and you are my last resort. I am in the ninth grade and live only with my mother, who is too busy to listen to my troubles, and besides she isn't much help. We don't have much money, so I have many other troubles besides Eve; but my problem about her weighs on my mind and, added to the others, makes me very nervous.

You see, I like Eve very much; in fact I get very jealous if she pals around with anyone else. I know this jealousy is a bad habit and I have tried hard to break it; but liking her so much, I can't control it. I can't find any real reason for my adoration of her, for she is very disloyal, and all my friends advise me to break up with her. But I simply can't. If we did break up, life would be very miserable, at least for the balance of the school year.

I have many friends, due to being honest, loyal and generous; but my loyalty gets me into trouble, and my height is a problem, at least I feel it is. I am very tall, five feet nine inches, and although people say I am attractive, I never feel at ease with my short friends. I feel that I stick out like a sore thumb. I had hoped for a lifelong friendship with Eve and have tried hard to maintain such. I would give up anything for her.

I have an inferiority complex, the result of all my problems, I guess. This letter isn't well written or "continuous," as our English teacher would say; but so many things are on my mind that I don't know how to express myself. I've never confided in a stranger before, and I hope you don't laugh at me. Please answer and help me, for I need someone to trust. C. F.

DEAR C. F.: Jealousy is an expression of anxiety and fear of loss, also a sign of very dependent character. That is why you haven't had much success in trying to curb your jealousy of Eve's other friendships. Trying to banish jealous feeling, without first treating the fright back of it, is somewhat like trying to prevent measles from breaking out, just by resolving that the rash ought to stop.

Your inferiority complex stems from a baffled feeling that you weren't completely loved by your mother, in past years when you were physically most helpless and needful of her protection. This ingrained sense of uneasiness bred a conviction that you weren't important to her or anybody; hence must be a human cipher, who never could make a hit with anyone.

All other anxiety symptoms you report stem from this lifelong feeling of being neglected, rejected, unheard, overlooked in infant tribulations, etc., by your mother.

You say here that you need someone to trust, which is indeed the nub of your nebulous problem. You long to feel completely secure in a love relationship with somebody special who puts you "first," ahead of all others in his (or her) affections. Somebody who is loyally devoted to your welfare, and ready with sympathy, understanding, wise helpful listener-interest, fixit abilities, etc., when you want comfort or a lift in coping with life.

In short, you are still longing for the perfect mother-care you missed; and without realizing what you are after, you expect your "best friend" Eve to give you devotion equal to that. Naturally she can't; and I daresay your anxious pleading, maybe also pouting and clinging behavior, much of the time, gets on her nerves and makes her feel tired or half-smothered; hence causes her to be more sharply unkind, disobliging and standoffish with you than with other girls, who don't act so "demanding."

However, don't be dismayed by this interpretation of your problem about Eve. Essentially you are very lovable, as anyone can tell by reading your letter. To grow into happiness, you need only to form a habit of giving yourself a good rating as a person; and a fair break in dealing with people, which means acting self reliant and self approving.

You are just at the age when girls (who are young for their years) get fervid crushes on other girls, or maybe a woman teacher. This happens as the babyish girl (your type at present) begins to turn her affections away from her mother (or parents) to "important" figures in the larger world outside the home; and the habit of mother-attachment causes her to "love" her own sex best, as a starter.

This is a significant step towards emotional maturity, and boys will be next in line for your "adoration." When your heart is palpitating over beaux, you'll probably get along fine with Eve, if you are still interested in her then. M. H.

Thin Gals Need Good Nutrition, Rest, Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain

THIN GIRLS KEEP asking for a miracle-working routine to put a little meat on protruding collarbones, banish the plucked-chicken look across the chest and round and firm the upper arms. All this and better health, too . . .

The right kind of exercise can work wonders in the direction of curves by stirring up the circulation and sending nourishment to impoverished tissues. Exercise always normalizes . . . and all exercise is developing in underdeveloped spots.

A wand is needed for this exercise—the handle off the carpet sweeper or an old broom handle will do. Sit in a straight chair and hold the wand overhead, hands wide apart, palms forward. Then slowly lower wand behind head and shoulders. Raise wand and repeat six counts. Put force on the downward motion and come up lightly . . . and hold head erect throughout exercise.

Standing erect, hold arms out in front of chest, crossed at wrists. With a quick, criss-cross motion, elbows straight, change position of hands, under-over, over-under, etc., about eight times . . . then fling arms out to the sides. Repeat the criss-cross and the side fling three complete times.

But girls, something else must be added . . . and that's fresh air. If you'll get out and walk for 30 minutes a day, about a mile and a half, head up . . . you can walk yourself into buoyant health and a honey of a figure.

With a balanced program—good nutrition, healthful exercise and adequate rest—you can be a vital slim girl.

Experiment Joan

Sensitive Skin Requires Special Treatment

(Third day of Joan's beauty program)

By Ann Lawrence

JOAN, WHO suffered a severe case of acne when she was growing up, was lucky in one respect. Correct treatment of this prevalent skin disease left only a few, small marks on her skin.

One aftermath, however, was a sensitive complexion with which ordinary cosmetics seemed to disagree. Now a super-smooth, satin-soft skin is one of a model's main requirements. So, since nature had not seen fit to endow Joan with one, artifice must come to the rescue. She needed a make-up base and powder that would not aggravate her skin, and a special formula was compounded for her by a dermatologist. This lotion not only serves as a powder foundation, but is soothing to areas affected by acne.

FROM HER DOCTOR, Joan learned that the local treatment of acne is directed toward the dissolving and removal of the plugs in the openings of the glands. She already knew that it is the stoppage and/or over-activity of the oil glands which is the underlying cause of acne.

To accomplish this, hot water and a good white soap should be used freely, at least three times a day. The affected skin should be washed with a rough cloth. And at night, after the last washing, the prescribed lotion should be freely applied by gentle massage over the entire affected regions of the skin, not only to the individual pimple.

WHILE USING the prescribed remedies, no other applications or treatments are permitted. Greases and creams of all sorts are prohibited, unless specifically prescribed by a physician, for they often add more grease to that already present in the gland openings, thus tending to make the acne worse.

Experience has shown that the following items tend to make some cases of acne worse. Therefore, Joan avoids them, even now, when the acne is arrested.

Medicines: Iodines. Look at the package of salt in the kitchen. If it is marked "iodized," discard it! Also cough mixtures may contain iodine.

Bromides and sedatives have been known to make the skin worse. Joan cannot use them, but each individual should consult her own dermatologist on this.

Foods: Chocolate, in any form. Nuts and sharp cheese. Watch out, too, for shellfish, pork, malted drinks and eggs. They may make your own skin condition worse. . . but again, it's an individual matter.

Joan learned that she must avoid all excess fat and sweets; that she must get as much exercise and sleep as possible. Six glasses of water a day are included in her basic food list. Once acne is cured, she found out, it can usually be prevented from recurring by following the general rules of good health.

TOMORROW: A Sleek and Slim Silhouette.

Dripping Brush Is No Fun When Painting the Ceiling; Anne Has a Few Remedies

DRIP! DRIP! DRIP! Drops of paint on your face, trickles down your arm! You've probably felt them if you ever tried painting a ceiling with just a plain brush. Anticipating such a situation, a Riverdale reader writes:

DEAR ANNE:

Is there some brush or device on the market for painting ceilings which will not allow the paint to run down the handle?

M. A. Davenport, Riverdale, Md.

The roller type of paint applier will solve this problem. Many paint stores sell these now. Another idea is to cut a hollow rubber ball in half. Make a small slit in the center of one ball half and force the handle of your paint brush through it. This inverted rubber bowl will then catch paint as it runs down.

DEAR ANNE:

I would appreciate some advice and instruction as to rehabilitating two chromium serving trays which were wedding gifts some time ago. They're worn in spots down to the copper plating, and have also become dark and tarnished looking. Is there a paint on the market which will recover the chromium — aluminum paint, maybe? — but wouldn't that give a dull instead of shiny finish? A. F. C., Washington.

Aluminum paint wouldn't work over the chrome. You'd have to have the trays replated with chromium to restore them satisfactorily. Consult one of the firms listed under "Platers" in the yellow telephone book to see if the job would be worth while in view of the cost.

FOR A. E. of Riverdale, who asked about stockings for one with a defective knee: The department store at 7th and F sts. nw. sells a knee-length hose that might answer the need. Elastic top. Could be worn over a full-length one in cold weather, perhaps. M. H. G., Washington.

DEAR ANNE:

How is the best way to loosen a piece of newspaper stuck to the top of my good dining-room table? The wood is bleached silver elm, I suppose, with a varnish finish.

The spot was caused when we were working with some plastic wood on newspaper on the table. The plastic wood has a drying action, causing the newspaper to adhere to the table — a piece about the size of a half dollar.

Mrs. E. B. McN., Washington.

Plastic wood has a lacquer base. Evidently this soaked into the finish of your table, softened it, and fused with it, along with the bit of newspaper. Removal of the finish by sanding or other means would really be the only way to get rid of the spot now. This could be done on a small area, which could then be refinished. Matching the finish in such a patch would be difficult, however, and had best be done by a professional refinisher.

DEAR ANNE:

A few of the drawers of my double dresser have become warped evidently, for I can open them but a few inches. My furniture is only two years old, was quite expensive and of supposed good quality. I am at a loss to explain this sudden occurrence. Can you explain it — or, better still, suggest how this can be corrected?

Mrs. C. J., Silver Spring, Md.

The way of the weather in this area is responsible for your furniture's behavior. Warping and swelling of wood is common in this high humidity.

For advice, if your husband is handy with tools, get him to plane down the bottom edges of the drawer and to sand the center guide.

As the furnace heat dries out the wood, you probabaly will be able to get the drawers out. Then, if your husband is handy with tools, he can plane down the bottom edges of the drawer and sand the center guide. This will help prevent the sticking again next time humidity sets in.

Blood-Type Program For U.S. Proposed

Cops De-Feet Own Purpose In Murders

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A national program of blood-typing everyone in this country who wants such protection against future super-explosive warfare was recommended here yesterday.

The program, to be operated by Public Health Service in cooperation with State and local health departments, was proposed by PHS's Chronic Disease Division for consideration at the forty-ninth annual conference of State and Territorial Health Officers.

It was submitted to the civil defense committee of the STHO, and discussion by the health officers is expected, probably on Thursday, a spokesman said.

Would Save Many Lives

"If atomic warfare, or even bombardment by high explosives, resulted in sudden and extensive civilian casualties," the recommendation stated, "citizens' knowledge of their blood types would save many lives."

The blood-typing program also would be valuable to an individual as a record for transfusion purposes, the report stated. It would further help the person's awareness to his Rh blood factor and thereby minimize the chances of accidents arising with Rh blood incompatability in the newborn child.

"Health departments are uniquely staffed to play an important role in the development and operation of this type of program," the recommendation stated.

The STHO conference, attended by 150 State and Territorial health officers, opened yesterday with conference committee meetings. Today and tomorrow, scientific sessions are scheduled at the National Institutes of Public Health, at Bethesda, Md.

Oscar Ewing, Federal Security administrator, will make an address on "Health and Welfare Priorities in National Defense" in a luncheon session today.

The NIH programming includes talks by Government scientists on catastrophe planning for hospitals, findings on the control of tooth decay by water fluoridation, techniques for cancer diagnosis, public attitudes on mental and emotional disturbances, and the status of new drugs.

Pedestrian Deaths High

BALTIMORE, Oct. 25 (AP).—A State Police report showed today that 35 percent of persons killed on the State's highways were on foot.

In warning pedestrians, Comdr. W. H. Weber of the department's field force said "a few pedestrian fatalities are due to reckless driving, but a great majority of them are due to the failure of the pedestrian himself to observe the fundamental rules of safety on the highway."

The figures showed a total of 2375 auto accidents last month. Thirty-seven of these resulted in the death of one or more persons.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 23 (AP).—Maryland policemen were told today that their own big, flat feet can ruin a murder case.

Dr. Richard Ford, head of the Harvard Univeristy department of legal medicine, speaking at a homicide seminar, warned the officers that "a footprint, for example, may be the vital piece of evidence and be ruined by police assistants who put their size 12's down on the scene."

He said the most serious handicap in solving murders was allowing tampering at the scene. Keep the curious away and "freeze" the scene, he said. Casts should be made of footprints and phtographs taken, he stressed.

Attending the seminar were officers from Baltimore, Cumberland, Hagerstown, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Prince Georges and Montgomery.

Dr. Ford advised homicide officers to make sure other members of their departments understand the value of preserving evidence and clues.

The Harvard expert, who was a key prosecution witness in last winter's mercy killing trial in New Hampshire of Dr. Hermann Sander, offered these other pointers to homicide officers:

1. Bullets, often vital pieces of evidence, are sometimes lost because officers fail to make a careful search for them.

2. Don't take a suspect back to a murder scene if there is trace evidence, such as blood on the clothes—a defense attorney might contend the suspect picked up the blood when police took him to the scene.

Mrs. Pawley's Plea of Illegal Divorce Fails

Mrs. Annie Hahr Pawley, former wife of former Ambassador to Brazil William D. Pawley, yesterday lost a fight for Supreme Court consideration of her plea that their divorce be declared invalid.

Sh contended that six weeks after Pawley got a Cuban divorce in 1942, he married his secretary in India. Later, she charged, Pawley "established her in a magnificent home in Miami Beach, Fla." This home, she charged, "was maintained with great lavishness, with numerous servants and there Mr. Pawley entertained in a very lavish style as one of America's wealthy men."

Mrs. Pawley had contended Florida courts improperly recognized the Cuban divorce. Pawley's attorneys said he had contributed about $150,000 to Mrs. Pawley's support and that "for more than three years (she) failed to take any action to contest" the divorce of which she had knowledge.

Boxer Perry Found Insane; Escapes Trial

Psychiatrists said that the pounding he took in the ring contributed to the 25-year-old Perry's ailment. It was diagnosed as undifferentiated psychosis, with schizophrenic characteristics. They said that he should recover with treatment.

His commitment to St. Elizabeth's Hospital comes as he awaits trial on a housebreaking and robbery charge. He and a companion allegedly took $30 and a wristwatch at gunpoint.

Gallinger Hospital psychiatrists Joseph L. Gilbert and Amino Perretti testified that Perry had 46 fights between 1943 and 1949, and during the period was knocked out twice and suffered three technical knockouts.

They said that traumatic origin was indicated, probably through repeated blows to the head. He has a record of 37 arrests.

Stolen From Safe

They said the auto firm was entered by a rear window.

MARYLAND

TWO-THIRDS ACRE—Lanham Park. Excellent value, city water, lovely trees, fast train and bus connections, near schools; low terms if desired. T. F. Halley, Hyattsville 0107.

The most beautiful setting for a home in this part of the United States. I have a mile and a half frontage of acreage on River of Bradley Rd. overlooking the Congressional Club. This is especially beautiful setting for a home. I advertised it and no buyers came forward, so I am building my own home on it and it's about completed and I expect to move into it in about 10 days.

The officials in Rockville County seat claimed I moved the Mt. Vernon home to the top of this hill, for this setting of this home is very much more beautiful than George Washington's home at Mt. Vernon. When I was a White House milkman, I used to deliver milk from Bailey's Cross Roads at 5 o'clock in the morning to the White House. I never dreamed that I would ever have a home with a more beautiful setting than the home for the President. The White House lot is level, and you cannot make a beautiful setting for a home on a level lot. This is a beautiful hill on River Road; it was one of the finest works of Almighty when He made this lovey setting. My wife and I go out and look at it every day, and we get a sensation every time we go. We get a thrill. I am going out right now to look at this beautiful setting. We have 44 acres adjoining another beautiful hill; they ought to put the White House on that one. There is a great deal of talk about only using the White House for official business and have a home on another beautiful hill for the President. My setting would be ideal, for the scenery and surroundings are out of this world. The price of this acreage as an entirety is what it cost me 22 years ago, since I owned it, allowing me interest and taxes, is $6500 an acre as an entirety, and this is no bull. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Reach me at my home, WO. 0933. Brokers, attention!

RUGS—Chinese,

Walter Winchell . . . In New York

Memos to the Editors:

Yesterday the State of New York requested the Supreme Court for an order dissolving The Cancer Welfare Fund, Inc., and an injunction forbidding its director Joseph Brandt (and others) from ever soliciting for charity again under the penalty of a prison sentence . . . When these decrees are signed State Attorney General N. L. Goldstein will request that all evidence in his possession be turned over to the proper authorities for criminal action.

This outfit is one of several flooding the Nation with letters containing new dollar bills . . . The letter dramatically urges the unsuspecting public to help relieve cancer victims . . . "Please return the dollar and whatever you can afford," it weeps . . . The Attorney General has charged that this Cancer Welfare group spent a nickel (for sufferers) out of every dollar donated in a year—pocketing the rest of it "for expenses" . . . He also alleges that the racketeers claimed its "medical panel give graciously of their time and services without compensation of any kind" . . . Added the Att'y General: "We have yet to find a medical panel connected with it."

The one dollar "come-on" money, he further sets forth, was furnished by the Empire Campaigns, Inc., located at the same address. The names of these loan sharks, who advanced the seed money for this and other $1 solicitations, are known to the Att'y General. They collected payment in full, plus 20 percent of all donations! The lowest form of usury . . . This is to remind you that the Runyon Cancer Fund and The American Cancer Society have no connection with the above . . . Every penny received by the Runyon Committee goes into cancer research . . . If you receive a letter containing the "appeal" and a dollar—you need not return it to the sender—and you will be within the law.

The Runyon Fund's next allocations include $100,000 to the Sloan-Kettering group (Memorial Hospital, the world's largest cancer research center); $150,000 to Damon Runyon Clinical Fellowships; $25,000 to Yale School of Medicine; $10,000 to Emory Hospital, Atlanta, Ga.; $10,000 to George Washington Univ. (Washington, D. C.); $10,000 to Harvard and others. A total of $311,500 from the Runyon Fund in one week.

Robert Sherrod, the Time-Life war correspondent, did a considerable part of the text for Life's remarkable picture history of World War II . . . One of his now-it-can-be-tolds is that one of our beloved admirals claimed that Jap Kamikazes were only 1 percent effective . . . Actually, they were 18.6 percent effective, 474 of our ships being hit out of 2550 suicide tries.

In Life the other day Winthrop Sargeant's piece, "The Art of Vituperation," bunched some of the sassiest insults aimed at public figures and others . . . He quoted invective barked by statesmen and journalists from Winston Churchill all the way down to Vishinsky . . . Of this department, the author reported: "His rather elementary vocabulary of epithet—is exemplified in words like skunk, scummunist and comrat" . . . Meaning we get to the point fast.

In the New York political war his foes again accused Franklin D. Roosevelt and, as usual, the charge backfired . . . FDR refused to run, they alleged, unless someone would assume his responsibility to the children crippled by polio . . . They mean, of course, that FDR refused to lead the political parade if it meant taking a runout on the kids who couldn't walk . . . His opponents do not claim now that it is illegal . . . They simply argue that they are doing the same thing by paying off Lieut. Gov. Hanley's debts . . . The ghost of Roosevelt must be enjoying it . . . Because his enemies always start out by accusing FDR of a crime—and wind up using him as an alibi.

Prof. Eisenhower's cleverness as a strategist, on and off the battlefield, is exciting . . . When Gov. Dewey embraced him as One of Our Boys on that recent "Meet the Press" stanza, the General lost no time making it clear that he was in nobody's hip pocket—disowning the GOP pat on the aft . . . A few days later the devastating Hanley letter flooded the front pages . . . Ike has learned from long experience abroad that when anyone throws his arms around you it's to prevent himself from falling down. In short, Ike knows the difference between an embrace and a clinch.

A college professor recently noted that a great deal of the newspaper reporting is over the heads of the average reader . . . He added that too many editors encouraged the fancy-pants wordage, and some of the editors rejoined that they were writing for the educated, and the critic could go to Blazes, meaning Hell . . . That critic, of course, was targetting such show-offy writing as the following. The book reviewer for the Herald Tribune: "The wonder grows at the exacerbation of the South." The dear man means they were exasperated . . . The N. Y. Times' drama critic: "You can place your laughs pretty well down in the diaphragm." That's Mr. Atkinson's antiseptic way of saying belly-laughs . . . The same critic on Mr. Huxley's recent flop: "His style is discursive and didactic." Meaning: Hidden meanings; that it rambles . . . M. Abramson in the same papyrus (meaning blatt), writing of comedienne Kate Murtah: "She is a numismatist." He means Kate's a coin-collector . . . Virgil Thomson, the Trib's music oracle, mentions "a care for verisimilitude," when all he had to say was "truth" . . . Then there's Robert Ruark's comment about the Veep: "He drools over pretty young things under the mask of avuncular immunity." Mr. Ruark means Mr. Barkley is "uncle-like."

It reminds us of the newspaper publisher who put this memo on the city room bulletin board: "Little Words Have Guts!" . . . Under which a wag added: "He means: Intestinal Fortitude!"

FYI: The Holiday mag editors are in need of a holiday to recover from the shock of having published a full page color ad from the British Travel Service—extolling the pleasures of a vacation in merrie olde England. It appears directly across from S. J. Perelman's epistle, which blasts England more than any buzz-bomb . . . Be careful of items linking escaped Russian flier Lieut. Peter Pirogov. His name's been carelessly used in various columns with women he's never met. If it ever happens, he promises, he will announce the happy flash . . . BBC Continues Classic Radio

LONDON, Oct. 23 (U.P.) — The British Broadcasting Corporation today said that despite growing criticism it would continue its erudite "Third Program," which offers readings in the Greek classics and such as an antidote to low comedy and swing records.

The Third Program has no equivalent anywhere in the world. The nationalized BBC started it just after the war on the theory that there must be an audience of intellectual listeners who would prefer chamber music and chess instruction to jazz and jokes.

At the time everybody praised the lofty ideals of the Third—even though considerable doubt was expressed that it would fulfill the hope of the BBC.

Now the critics are beginning to mutter again. They feel the Third Program is eating up a lot of money that would be better applied to television, in which Britain once led the world but now badly trails the United States.

BBC figures are secret, but critics claim that £800,000 ($2,240,000) a year is spent on the Third, which, they estimate, has only 100,000 listeners. This is £8 ($22.40) a listener—and radio license holders only pay an annual fee of £1 ($2.80).

The two other networks run by the BBC have a combined listening audience of about 20,000,000, which works out to two shillings fourpence (30 cents) a head.

So, say the critics, this is putting the cost of culture too high.

Good Question

Who'll Broadcast That CBS Color?

By John Crosby

THE COLUMBIA Broadcasting System's 405-line, incompatible color television system is now the law of the land, subject, of course, to change by R. C. A.'s court fight, which is still in the offing.

Crosby

Since the F. C. C. decision, the emphasis in news reports has been entirely on the television set manufacturers, who are almost wholly and violently opposed to the manufacture of C. B. S. color sets for the simple reason that they are all tooled up and in mass production and have —or had—an immense, hungry market for black and white sets.

However, there is another angle that has been widely neglected. Who is going to broadcast color? As of right now, only one TV station in the nation—WCBS-TV—has the equipment to originate C. B. S.-type color broadcasts.

However, any station connected to WCBS by cable could transmit WCBS-originated color programs. WMAR-TV in Baltimore and several other stations—WTOP in Washington, which is 45 percent C. B. S.-owned, and WCAU in hPiladelphia—have expressed interest in broadcasting C. B. S. color. WMAR-TV plans to be carrying C. B. S. programs within 30 to 60 days, provided they can get a few receivers in Baltimore to pick up the programs. (There are from 25 to 50 receivers in existence capable of picking up the color telecasts.)

HOWEVER, WMAR-TV declares firmly it will not pre-empt time now sold on black and white to commercial interests to broadcast color to an audience of nobody. This is everyone's problem. TV broadcasters have spent roughly one billion dollars—give or take a hundred million or so—and four years building an audience which is almost but not quite big enough to put television in the black. They are understandably cold to any proposition which would put them right back where they were four years ago. Namely, with no audience.

It is no understatement to say that no television broadcaster in this country—including C. B. S.—wants to tackle color at this time. Because it is C. B. S.'s baby, WCBS-TV is committed to broadcast 20 hours a week of color and has further stated that it will devote at least two half-hour programs of prime evening time to color broadcasts. Those two programs are already driving C. B. S. program directors out of their wits.

C. B. S., like the other networks, is almost entirely sold out on evening time. When those two color broadcasts come on, millions of TV sets in the New York area—at least those tuned to WCBS—will go dark. And the average set-owner will understand clearly for the first time something he only dimly understands now. You can't get C. B. S. color on present sets. Consequently, your average set-owner will switch over to DuMont or A. B. C. or N. B. C. C. B. S. will be broadcasting color to an audience of nobody. In fact, C. B. S. is going to have great difficulty selling the black-and-white time following its color broadcasts to a sponsor because the network will have lost 100 percent of its audience. As someone remarked the other day: "If C. B. S. wins another victory like this, it'll be out of business."

ONE FINAL WORD. C. B. S. color television has, I think, been maligned by the word "degraded" which has been applied to it by many of its critics. It ought to be explained that "degraded" is used entirely in a technical sense, that it means only that the definition has diminished from 531 to 405 lines. However, to these tired, layman's eyes and I imagine to most eyes, C. B. S. color is a magnificent thing. It brings a splendor and opulence to any TV broadcast, no matter how trivial, which cannot be imagined by anyone who has not seen it. Don't confuse it with Technicolor movies. It's better than that already.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

You Can Still Use Them For Newspapers and Parking Meters

A Washington Post advertiser recently offered the opinion that what this country needs is a good nickel cigar and a good nickel glass of beer. R. B. muses he could have said it in less words by borrowing the old adage: "What this country needs is a good 5-cent nickel."

CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER?

The late gambling king, Jimmy LaFontaine, once observed sagely that "to a loser, nothing is funny." W. M. Devine, of 234 F st. nw., appears to be nothing loser as a result of the local racing season, because he gets a big boot out of a string of advertisements that appeared in a local newspaper the other day.

Starting at the top of the column, there was an ad bought by the Laurel racetrack. Below it was one telling about Gray Line bus service to the track; below that two more, offering Capital Transit and Trailways buses to the course.

Then came an ad for a pawnbroker—and at the end of the line, a small notice offering guns and bullets.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

My mother has just come home from after a long illness at George Washington University Hospital. She got excellent care, and we're glad she's well again. But in paying the bill, it seemed to me that the pharmacy prices were too high, and since then I've checked with privately owned drug stores. On some items I paid double the amount at which these drugs are available elsewhere. Why should this be?

Name Withheld.

Dear Sir:

Victor F. Ludewig, superintendent at the hospital, says that: "All things considered, our prices compare favorably with others.

"When making comparisons on the prices of drugs and medications, one must be certain that like quantities, dosages strengths and qualities are being compared.

"It should also be borne in mind that a drug store merely sells the item, and its service usually stops there. But a hospital frequently has costs in connection with the administration of the drug, and these costs sometimes exceed the price of the drug itself.

"For example, the hospital provides hypodermic syringes and needles, and these must be cleaned and sterilized. Most equipment of this type is fragile, and breakage is high. And trained personnel is required, to give medications.

"A hospital pharmacy's selling price (including services) cannot, therefore, be compared with prices advertised by drug stores.

"I might also mention that, whereas most drug stores operate on a cash basis, a hospital is obligated to furnish whatever drugs a patient needs, regardless of his financial circumstances. In addition, there are 69 drugs on our 'free' list; no charge is ever made for them, to any patient."

And that about covers it, I guess. Being sick is an expensive experience these days. Even at cut rates.

Bill.

STOP, LOOK & LISTEN

Mrs. D. T. Link, jr., of 229 N. Galveston st., Arlington, Va., suggests an excellent sequel to our item about buses which do—and do not—stop at railroad crossings.

The Arlington County Police Department recently sent out a circular letter reminding motorists that they must be especially careful during the school term, when many children are on the streets going to and from their classes.

Part of the letter emphasized a fact that some motorists don't even know: In Virginia, when a school bus stops you must stop too, whether you're headed in the same or in the opposite direction.

What's more, you must remain stopped until the children are clear of the highway. The charge for failing to comply is "reckless driving," and the penalty can be quite severe.

GIVE-AWAYS

DON'T BE TOO SURE, POP

To mark the occasion, the gals in the office made him an honorary member of the Women's Division of the committee, wrote a long poem dedicated to him, and then lined up so that each could plant a kiss on his cheek.

"I had an awful time getting the lipstick off my face before I went home," Pop told me afterward, "but actually, I don't suppose that precaution was really necessary. When a man is 65, his his wife isn't very apt to be jealous."

INFORMATION PLEASE

How come so many Arlington auto tags are upside down? Is it some kind of secret code, like putting a stamp on a letter upside down?

Hanley Story On Finances Deep-Rooted

By Drew Pearson

Hanley

At any rate I have been taking a bird's-eye view of all the rumpus kicked up in New York over the question of how Governor Dewey inveigled, enticed or "bribed" Lieut. Gov. Joe Hanley out of the governorship race. And it seems to me that my colleagues of the press back East are missing a big part of the story.

The story really began about the last week in August when Winthrop Aldrich of the Chase National Bank telephoned his brother-in-law, John D. Rockefeller jr., at Bar Harbor, Me., asking his help in getting Lieut. Gov. Hanley out of the race for Governor. This was before Dewey got into the picture.

And the moral to the whole story is that when you get the big-money boys into politics something always smells.

The story is all in the back files of the Washington Merry-Go-Round and since the politicos are still gasping for breath over it maybe the details are worth retelling now.

The story began last August 31 as follows: "Powerful efforts were made over the weekend to persuade Lieut. Gov. Joe Hanley to withdraw from the race for Governor in favor of Tom Dewey.

"Winthrop Aldrich, head of the Chase Bank, conferred in Bar Harbor with his brother-in-law, John D. Rockefeller, and together they telephoned Roy Howard, head of the Scripps-Howard newspapers and a powerful Dewey backer. They also phoned Frank Gannett, head of the Gannett newspaper chain and asked him to come to New York immediately. Gannett was reached on his yacht on Lake Ontario and flew to New York in his private plane for lunch with Aldrich. With him went Carl Hallenauer of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co. Meanwhile, Roy Howard promised to write an editorial in the New York World-Telegram urging that Governor Dewey be drafted for a third term."

In other words the Wall Street boys, not Tom Dewey, made the first move to entice Hanley out of the running. Publisher Gannett incidentally would not go along. Though he lunched with Aldrich at the Chase Bank, he refused to plump for Dewey.

"Deweyite pressure on Lieut. Gov. Joe Hanley to withdraw from the New York gubernatorial race was so intense Friday night that for a time Hanley lost the use of his one good eye . . ."

"During the conference with Dewey and friends neither Frank Gannett nor Norman Gould of the Gould Pump Co. were able to reach him. It was they who helped raise the kitty to pay up Hanley's $30,000 debts but even they could not get to their man during the crucial conference which 'drafted' Dewey. Most interesting fact was that Dewey was anything but drafted."

Third chapter was the actual terms of the pay-off to Hanley to run for the United States Senate instead of Governor. This was published in the Washington Merry-Go-Round September 13, namely, that Hanley, if defeated for the Senate, would be appointed to the New York Thruway Commission at $15,000 and also be made vice president of an oil company at $15,000 annually.

"Friends in the Dewey camp have also promised to repay the $30,000 which Kingsland Macy, Frank Gannett and Norman Gould put up to pay off Hanley's debts" said the Merry-Go-Round on September 13.

However, the full story of Hanley and Dewey goes back even further, to when Governor Dewey conducted a grand jury investigation of Lieut. Gov. Hanley and other Albany legislators—then suddenly called off the grand jury. Since then Dewey and Hanley have been friends only on the surface. Here is the account carried in the Merry-Go-Round six years ago—October 31, 1944.

"An Albany grand jury was scheduled to probe a charge that Lieut. Gov. Hanley put his son on the State payroll and then drew most of the salary paid to his son. Any such violation would be a violation of New York State law.

"This column interviewed Hanley and he admitted that his son Jim had been employed as an attorney for Meach, Harmon, Lytell, Blackmore and Biff, an accounting firm, from April 1, 1939 to July 1, 1939 while the firm was installing a new system of budgeting costs for New York alone. During that brief period young Hanley received $3000, of that amount $2000 turned up in the bank account of his father.

"I didn't know the money had been put in my account," Hanley told this column, "until I went to the bank to arrange a loan and they told me I didn't need to borrow any money, since my son had deposited some to my account."
